The Modern Welfare State

The Communitarian Response to the Modern Welfare State

From Critique to Community

The community, defined by the "victim" status become the platform for communitarian action and resources

The "commodification" of victim status, now constituted as a platform for the procurement of resources leads to the proliferation of such statuses.

The proliferation of statuses leads to conflict over the statuses and the "ideology of victimization" impedes individual and collective processes of excellence.
The focus is on being equal in one's degree of relative victimization as a group or an individual.
