Statistics in Afghanistan: Accent On Foreign Trade And Demography

The rapid pace of economic growth in Afghanistan has been accompanied by a significant increase in foreign trade and investment. The government has implemented policies aimed at attracting foreign investment and diversifying the economy away from reliance on the traditional agricultural sector. A significant portion of the country's trade is now with developing countries, particularly in South Asia. The USD has been the currency of choice for many foreign investors due to its stability and acceptance across the region.

Foreigners and Afghans alike are predicting a positive outlook for the future, with hopes of continued economic growth and development. The government has announced plans to further improve the infrastructure to facilitate trade and investment, including the expansion of seaports and the construction of new airports.

Afghanistan has also been successful in attracting foreign aid and assistance, particularly from the United Nations and other international organizations. These funds have been used to support vital projects such as road construction, education, and health services.

In conclusion, the future of Afghanistan's foreign trade and economic growth is promising, with continued efforts to diversify the economy and improve the business environment.

Text of General Declaration Signed By Afghanistan And France

For a period of three years, the President of the Republic of France, Mr. Charles de Gaulle, and the President of the Islamic Republic of Afghanistan, Mr. Mohammad Daud Khan, hereby sign the following:

Chapter I

Title: Settlement of Disputes

The two countries agree to settle all disputes which may arise between them in a friendly and peaceful manner, in accordance with international law.

Chapter II

Role of the United Nations

Both countries agree to respect and promote the role of the United Nations, and to cooperate in international organizations.

Chapter III

Economic and Cultural Cooperation

The two countries agree to cooperate in the fields of economy and culture, including the exchange of students, scholars, and cultural materials.

Chapter IV

The completion of the Peace Treaty

The two countries agree to work towards the completion of the Peace Treaty and to promote a just and lasting peace in the region.

The above agreement is made in the spirit of friendship and cooperation, and the two countries look forward to a bright future together.
