November 15, 1993

The sources listed on the following pages are in response to requests for information on the behaviorally and emotionally disturbed youth and service-learning. They were obtained by conducting searches of the ERIC database on CD-ROM. Broad topics were chosen for a comprehensive selection of references. With several hundred records identified, only those with direct relevance are included here. In addition, references from several service-learning bibliographies are included. The search for more sources of information on this topic is ongoing and this compilation will be updated periodically.

To obtain reproductions of the sources with ERIC numbers, call the ERIC Document Reproduction Services (EDRS) at 1-800-443-ERIC (3742) to place an order or to find out more about the services they provide. For paper copies, the price is $3.53 for each level: PC01=$3.53, PC02=$7.06, etc. Most university libraries have some or all of the journals that are sources for the following articles. They may also have all of the ERIC records on micro fiche for public use. Because of copyright laws, NICSL is not able to reproduce material in our reference collection.

TITLE: The Effects of Service Activities on Adolescent Alienation.
JOURNAL CITATION: Adolescence; v21 n83 p675-87 Fall 1986
ABSTRACT: This research evaluated the effects of involvement of adolescents in community service activities on levels of alienation. It was proposed that alienation could be reduced through the implementation of a model which utilized community service activities to facilitate adolescent access to adult society, development of responsibility, collaborative and cooperative work, and control over planning and outcomes. It is suggested that adolescent involvement in service activities can produce positive benefits, among which are reduced levels of alienation, improved school behavior, improved grade point average, and acceptance by the adult community. These findings also suggest that females respond more positively to school when allowed to problem-solve collectively and collaboratively.

TITLE: Do Adolescents Help and Share?
JOURNAL CITATION: Adolescence (v26 n102 p449-56 Sum 1991)
ABSTRACT: Investigated prosocial behaviors (i.e., helping, sharing) of 37 nonhandicapped and handicapped adolescents in public schools. Found that adolescents with handicaps displayed more prosocial behavior than did nonhandicapped; however, nonhandicapped adolescents perceived themselves as engaging more in prosocial behavior than did handicapped peers. Found that teachers of handicapped adolescents used prosocial teaching style more than teachers of nonhandicapped. (Author/PVV--ERIC)
