2011

Catch the Spirit: A Student's Guide to Community Service

Prudential

Follow this and additional works at: https://digitalcommons.unomaha.edu/slceguides

Part of the Service Learning Commons

Please take our feedback survey at: https://unomaha.az1.qualtrics.com/jfe/form/SV_8cchtFmpDyGfBLE

Recommended Citation
https://digitalcommons.unomaha.edu/slceguides/6

This Article is brought to you for free and open access by the Service Learning and Community Engagement Examples at DigitalCommons@UNO. It has been accepted for inclusion in Guides by an authorized administrator of DigitalCommons@UNO. For more information, please contact unodigitalcommons@unomaha.edu.
What’s Right for Me?
You may make an instant decision to volunteer in your community. But don’t be hasty in selecting a project or organization. First, take time to think about what problems or issues in your neighborhood or community concern you.

Then, as you search for the “right” volunteer activity, ask yourself:

- How much time do I have to commit?
- What talents or skills do I offer?
- What do I want to get out of my involvement?
- Will I enjoy this type of service?

There are many reasons to volunteer. But one should be universal—volunteer for something you can enjoy.

Don’t limit your thinking. You may want to volunteer in the structured environment of a large organization, or you may prefer the more informal “family” feeling of a smaller group. Perhaps you want to create your own volunteer activity by engaging your friends or family, or maybe just work alone on a project. When you’ve selected or narrowed your volunteer interests, you may want to talk to your parents, friends, a teacher or club sponsor, a counselor, or someone at your church, synagogue, or other place of worship. They might have suggestions on how to go about making it happen. Call organizations and local government offices that offer services to the public. Read your local newspaper. Watch and listen to the television and radio news for ideas. Look online for volunteer opportunity databases.

After you’ve made a choice, commit yourself to it. Give it your energy—and adequate time—to determine if it’s a good fit.

What Can a Volunteer Do?
This information can help serve as a compass to point you to some of the many possibilities for volunteering. Combine these suggestions with your own ideas and creativity—and go for it.
A PRESCRIPTION FOR SATISFACTION
So the medical or healthcare field intrigues you. Take heart, opportunities abound. Consider volunteering at a hospital, local blood bank, a medical clinic for the poor, a nursing home, an emergency medical squad, or a cancer or AIDS facility. Maybe you’d enjoy entertaining kids in the hospital, or collecting books and toys to help them pass the time. Many young volunteers also get involved in walkathons and other fund-raising activities to fight major diseases, or to provide medical care for those who cannot afford it.

ANIMAL MAGNETISM
If animals are your passion, here’s a flock of ideas. Check with your local zoo, animal shelter or humane society. Volunteer chores can include cleaning cages, feeding and exercising the “residents,” assisting with adoptions, working in the office, or planning fund-raising events. Or consider raising a guide dog for a blind person. Perhaps your interests are more in tune with endangered species. Think about volunteering at a wildlife refuge or nature habitat where you can steer your commitment to awareness campaigns or fund-raising activities.

YOU’RE READING OUR MIND
If you enjoy reading, you’ve got a skill that’s easy to share. Community shelters (for the homeless or abused) often house children who are as hungry for fun and stories as for a square meal. Libraries, children’s hospitals and Head Start programs may jump at the offer of organized story hours. On a more personal level, you can read to an elderly neighbor or someone who is blind. Or check into a local organization that needs readers for a “talking books” program. Consider starting a book drive at your school or community center to donate to schools or other community facilities.

IF YOUR HEART’S IN THE ARTS
Young volunteers with an interest in the arts can share those talents, as individuals or in a group. Check with senior centers, shelters, daycare programs, local parks, or recreation programs. Offer to serve as an usher at a community theater or help find stage props and costumes. Or offer assistance at an arts center or a local art gallery. You could present theatrical skits, musical revues, magic shows, concerts or other forms of entertainment at senior citizen homes, hospitals or other community facilities. Not only does your contribution help keep cash-strapped arts alive in your community, but it also helps build a lifelong appreciation for the arts and brings enjoyment to many.

SOME SPORTING GOOD IDEAS
Share your athletic talent and interest as a coach or coaching assistant in sports or recreational activities. “Help wanted” signs are often posted at volunteer organizations serving people with mental or physical challenges; YMCA, YWCA or Red Cross chapters; local civic organizations (like the Elks, Kiwanis, Rotary or Lions clubs); city parks; and recreation or neighborhood programs for low-income kids. They often seek volunteers to help out with Little League, swimming, softball, basketball, soccer, tennis, gymnastics, or other recreational activities. Or collect used equipment to help out a local sports program.

APPLY YOUR ABILITIES TO DISABILITIES
Be a special friend to people with mental or physical disabilities. Not only will your skills contribute to the programs, but you may help change public perception about people who have special challenges. Volunteer to help with local, regional or state Special Olympics competitions held in many communities. Local groups and residential facilities often need volunteers for field trips to museums and amusement parks, recreation and sports activities, or arts and crafts programs. Contact community centers or other facilities for disabled persons, or ask your mayor’s office for options.

PRESERVE THE PLANET—RECYCLE
Concern about our environment is serious stuff. And your commitment can start right at home. If you’re not doing it now, start recycling your own newspapers, glass and aluminum. Then get your neighbors involved. If your school doesn’t have a recycling program, talk with your teachers or principal about getting one started. The company that supplies your school cafeteria might lend a hand in this effort. Young volunteers also have been known to recycle tires, motor oil, telephone books, greeting cards, Christmas trees and computer ink cartridges.
HEART AND SOLE
Perhaps you don’t want to take on the responsibility of organizing and planning. There are other ways to help your favorite causes. There are many activities in which you can let your feet do the talking—at dance marathons and other indoor activities or at outdoor events, such as bicycle races, walkathons, and charity runs.

BE A CRIME FIGHTER
So you have an interest in police work as a career, or are concerned about crime in your community. Contact your local police department to see if you can help develop or get involved in a student-watch program. How about developing a school watch program? Talk with your principal or school counselor about establishing a student patrol that keeps an eye out for and reports theft, graffiti and other crimes at your school. Or think about educating other young people about avoiding drugs, dealing with strangers, or staying safe on the Internet. Another possibility: volunteer to take part in “teen court” justice systems that operate in many cities.

MANY IN NEED, INDEED
Perhaps you’ve been concerned about homeless or needy people. Their needs are many—from shelter to food and clothing. Community projects and church-affiliated organizations such as Habitat for Humanity need volunteers to construct housing for the poor. Volunteer to help prepare or distribute food at community or church-sponsored soup kitchens. A local low-income housing project may need some help in a community garden. Or you can plant and tend your own garden, and then donate the fruits (or vegetables) of your labor to a local food bank, or sell them to support your favorite charity. Many young volunteers also have had success with school or community campaigns to collect food, clothing, books, toys, school supplies, eyeglasses, toiletries, backpacks and holiday gifts for the disadvantaged.

SPREAD THE WORD
Perhaps you’d like to educate fellow students and others in your community about an issue that’s important to you. For example, you could warn fellow students about smoking, drug or alcohol abuse, AIDS, or negative peer pressure. Or you could promote important ideals such as racial tolerance, a clean environment, or traffic safety. You might want to put together an educational presentation and take it to schools in your area, or launch a general awareness campaign in your community.

SPRUCE UP YOUR TOWN
Here are some earthy ideas to sink your hands into. Your local parks department may welcome an offer to plant trees and flowers in public parks, along walkways, or in downtown areas. Local environmental groups, landscaping companies and the National Arbor Day Foundation often give away tree seedlings. Talk to your principal about ways to beautify and maintain your school grounds. Or consider cleaning up litter on a regular basis from neighborhood streets, local streams, highway shoulders and other public places. Another idea: offer to help paint over graffiti on school or city property.

KIDS ARE YOUR THING
If you like helping other kids, or are considering a teaching career, volunteering can work for you. Schools, churches, libraries and community centers often have tutoring or mentoring programs for youngsters. Local camps, especially those for sick or low-income kids, frequently need counselors. Other places to consider: children’s hospitals, daycare centers, shelters, programs for “latchkey” kids, homework tutoring phone lines, and Big Brothers or Big Sisters programs. Some city or county courtrooms are interested in activities for children who must come to court with a parent; ask about setting up a room with books and toys, and volunteer to help care for these children. If you prefer, you could organize your own “camp” to get local children involved in sports, music, science, theatre, gardening or some other activity.

RECOGNIZE THOSE WHO SERVE
Reward our military personnel by collecting personal care packages, food, and other items and send them overseas. Gather your friends and adopt a soldier, a military unit, or just send a note of thanks to individuals in uniform. For those who have returned from service, you can visit a local veteran’s facility or hospital.

GOING GLOBAL
Volunteering knows no boundaries. Volunteer abroad to teach foreign students, donate books, work on conservation projects or assist disaster recovery efforts. If you can’t travel overseas, you can still help by raising awareness of global issues or collecting items for international communities in need.
Local Resources for Volunteer Ideas

| Principal, counselor, teacher |
| Churches, synagogues and other places of worship |
| Organizations such as the United Way—and their many affiliates |
| Mayor’s office |
| Civic service groups, such as the Elks, Rotary, Kiwanis, Lions clubs |
| Local arts centers, community theaters |
| Food pantries, shelters for domestic violence and the homeless |
| Zoos, animal shelters, conservation groups |
| Hospitals, hospices, nursing homes |
| Residential facilities for disabled persons or abused children |
| Newspapers, television and radio |
| Schools and libraries |
| Local community and volunteer centers |

We hope this booklet has given you some ideas for volunteer service and information on where to find organizations in need of young volunteers. There is little doubt that your help is needed, whether in your school, your neighborhood or city, or through your place of worship. Match your interests with the many volunteer opportunities available.

If you are still stumped, on the next page is a list of some national service organizations that offer information on youth volunteerism. Write or call them for additional ideas.

Ready, set, go—Catch the Spirit of volunteerism!

John R. Strangfeld
Chairman and
Chief Executive Officer
Prudential Financial

Do’s and Don’ts of Successful Volunteering

Do be flexible. It is rare to find the “perfect” fit right away. Keep an open mind—you might discover something new that interests you.

Do be persistent. Volunteer coordinators are often busy, so don’t assume they’re not interested in you if they don’t call you right away.

Do attend orientation meetings. Keep in mind that informed volunteers are the best volunteers. These meetings will help you do the best job possible.

Do take necessary training classes. Ask about them before you decide to get involved and be prepared to learn what will be needed.

Do be responsible. Show up on time and follow through with your commitments. People will be depending on you.

Don’t expect to start at the top. You have to work hard and prove your worth before you are given more responsibility.

Don’t think that volunteering has to be a group effort. You can start your own volunteer program and do it on your own time.

Do expect to get plenty of personal enjoyment and satisfaction from your volunteer experiences.

YOUR OWN SPECIAL BRAND OF HELP
If you want to do something in your own special way, put on your creative thinking cap. On your own, or with a few friends, you can raise money for your favorite cause through bake sales, car washes, and garage sales. Or form a volunteering club at your school that can work on a wide variety of service projects.

Your own special brand of help
National Organizations with Information for Young Volunteers

The Prudential Spirit of Community Initiative
751 Broad Street, 16th Floor
Newark, NJ 07102
spirit.prudential.com

Corporation for National and Community Service
1201 New York Avenue, N.W.
Washington, DC 20525
www.nationalservice.gov

America’s Promise
110 Vermont Avenue, N.W.
Suite 900
Washington, DC 20005
www.americaspromise.org

Points of Light Institute and HandsOn Network
600 Means Street
Suite 210
Atlanta, GA 30318
www.pointsoflight.org
www.handsonnetwork.org

generationOn
6 East 43rd Street
25th Floor
New York, NY 10017
www.generationon.org

Do Something
24-32 Union Square East
4th Floor South
New York, NY 10003
www.dosomething.org

Volunteer Match
717 California Street, Second Floor
San Francisco, CA 94108
www.volunteermatch.org

Youth Service America
1101 15th Street, N.W.
Suite 200
Washington, DC 20005
www.ysa.org

This booklet was produced by Prudential in cooperation with the Federal Citizen Information Center. It is part of The Prudential Spirit of Community Initiative, which seeks to promote volunteer service and community involvement by young people. The initiative also includes:

The Prudential Spirit of Community Awards, an international recognition program that honors young people in middle and high school grades for outstanding volunteer service. In the United States, applications are accepted each fall through participating schools and officially designated local organizations, and awards are presented at the local, state and national level. The top two youth volunteers in each state and the District of Columbia receive $1,000 awards, engraved silver medallions and a trip to Washington, DC. Ten national honorees receive an additional $5,000, gold medallions, and crystal trophies. The program has been operating in the U.S. since 1995 in partnership with the National Association of Secondary School Principals, and also has been introduced in Japan, South Korea, Taiwan, Ireland and India.

The Prudential Spirit of Community Web site at spirit.prudential.com, featuring news and information about The Prudential Spirit of Community Awards program, profiles of outstanding youth volunteers, volunteer tips and project ideas for young people, and more.

The generationOn Youth Leadership Institute, a unique leadership and service training program for high school students. Developed and initially funded by Prudential, the Institute features an innovative curriculum developed by the Center for Creative Leadership and is now administered in communities throughout the United States by generationOn, the youth division of Points of Light Institute.