In your capacity as a professional librarian, what aspects of your job bring you the most joy?
Nothing makes me happier then working with students individually or as a class. It's exciting to see their eyes light up when they learn a new way to use technology that is useful. I try to help them see that finding the best information is like a treasure hunt and putting the pieces together is like completing a puzzle. I enjoy spending time planning ways to make learning fun and engaging so that students look forward to the work it takes to complete challenging projects. It's very fulfilling to oversee student growth over four years of high school as we prepare them for college, careers and a lifetime of personal appreciation for literature.

"Experience is a hard teacher because she gives the test first and the lesson after."
~ Vernon Sanders Law

Please discuss one personal characteristic that you feel has contributed to your success as a school librarian?
I really enjoy creating an inviting school library environment. It's important for me to do whatever it takes to help a student or teacher solve any problem or find any resource. I have a passion for finding curriculum connections across content areas to help all students grow as literary adults in an information rich environment. I love to figure out an application using technology that my teachers can use.
Please share a favorite book you have read recently.

I am constantly in search of adding great multicultural novels to my repertoire that will appeal to high school students. Most recently I read the book titled Golden Boy, by Tara Sullivan. This book is about a thirteen year old boy named Habo who lives in Tanzania and was born an albino despite the brown skin of his parents. Habo's father abandons the family, his mother can hardly look at him and albinos are hunted for their body parts which are believed to bring good luck at a high price. I found myself cheering for Habo as he ran for his life and learned to accept himself along the way.

Please share a favorite website you have used for instruction or professional development.

This year I have used Common Sense Media to teach digital citizenship to all of our freshmen. The Elkhorn School District recognizes the importance of teaching students responsible habits, safety and etiquette when using technology. Edutopia is one of my favorite websites for professional development and I was recently asked to help a friend edit an article to be published by them.

The positive school climate at Elkhorn South makes it extremely easy to connect with our enthusiastic and receptive teachers about curriculum. They are very open to letting me work with their students and plan ways to use the library resources to enrich lessons. This year our district has purchased the Gale Database for both high schools. Cengage Learning, who produces Gale Databases, added Google as an integrated feature to assist students in a seamless research process. It has been fun teaching students in each English class how to save their articles and annotations in Google Drive, and take advantage of all Google tools when crafting the final paper.

What is your education / library/experience background?
I have a Bachelor of Science in Secondary Education; Language Arts Endorsement from the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. I actually didn’t begin my teaching career until our youngest son started kindergarten as I opted to be a stay-at-home mom and substitute teach. I currently teach at Wisner-Pilger Public Schools where I have spent fourteen years teaching language arts before moving into the K-12 library media specialist position last year. I will graduate this December with my Master of Science in Secondary Education; School Library Endorsement. While I am looking forward to graduation, I will definitely miss seeing everyone at UNO.

What is on your reading list? What are your favorites? Your recommended? Your want to read lists?

My reading list tends to cover many genres, and the list continues to grow as students share with me book titles they think I should read and add to our collection. I do prefer YA books as it helps me carry on discussions with the students, and I personally feel the writing in YA books is stronger since they are more heavily reviewed.

"I feel one of my main responsibilities is to best prepare our students for their lives after they graduate regardless of the career path they choose."

What professional journal or article have you read and would recommend? Why?

School Library Journal is my primary resource as they have an abundance of resources for school library media specialists. Their reviews are the first ones I look at when generating book orders for the district’s three libraries. Because my background is secondary education, I rely on Library Sparks to help me create lessons and themes for our elementary library students.

What do you do in your “down time”? Do you have any hobbies? How do you relax?

Reading is at the top of the list for what I do in my down time as well as my hobby, but I also love to travel. Each summer I travel with students and their families to different countries around the world and have also started traveling with them in the United States. I have currently visited sixteen countries, and that number will jump to twenty after next summer’s excursion to Europe. Having traveled, I also love to cook and try to recreate the many dishes we have enjoyed overseas.

What deep dark secret would you like to share?

I would love to teach for a year in another country. I think it would be an amazing experience to live in another country and really experience the culture, sites, food, and interact with the people as they go about their daily lives. Great Britain, Ireland, France, and Spain are some of the places where I would like to teach and learn more about their cultures.

Name one of your personal or professional qualities that will make you a leader in 21st century library and information centers?

Some might call it a passion bordering on an addiction, but I am constantly looking for new technology tools and skills to share with faculty and students. I feel one of my main responsibilities is to best prepare our students for their lives after they graduate regardless of the career path they choose.

What advice do you have for other students who are currently enrolled in Library Science studies?

In every class you are being presented with a wealth of information that you can take back and share with your patrons immediately. This is an amazing program that will help you grow as a professional – take advantage of all the resources and knowledge not only from those teaching the classes, but also from the other students taking the classes with you. Each assignment and project gives you a chance to become a stronger advocate for our profession.

What do you see as key future trends and challenges for school librarians?

Technology is already playing a large part in shaping the job description of library media specialists. Patrons have greater access to not only resources, but also different types of resources such as e-books. Part of our job will be to stay on top of the trends and then be prepared to teach our patrons how to use these resources adequately. Education will continue to be the key, as they need to know how to effectively use the barrage of information now available. I think we will also see an increase in collaboration between faculty and library media specialist as new technologies emerge at an ever more rapid pace.

What do you think will be your legacy in this profession?

I would like my legacy to be sparking a love of learning, reading, and just a constant curiosity about the world around us. I would like to know that what I do goes beyond just helping our students succeed in school, but that I also help prepare them for life. One of my favorite moments is when a student approaches me outside of school and shares with me the book he or she is reading or a project he or she is working on!

EMBRACING THE FUTURE

Integrate your technology intentionally

“In April 2015, the iPad turned five years old. For those of us in libraries, the tablet revolution sparked by the iPad ushered in a period of excitement and exploration. We wondered how tablets might change the way we engage with our users. If nothing else, we understood that tablets and mobile devices held great promise for enhancing teaching and learning opportunities, reference services, access to collections, and circulation services.” To read the rest of the article: http://americanlibrariesmagazine.org/2015/10/30/embracing-the-future/
