Viet Cong Kill Over 50 Hit 25 Copters Near Danang Base

SAGAN, April 1 (Reuters) — Viet Cong guerrillas standing shoulder to shoulder shot down three helicopters, killed two U.S. officers and wounded 14 others, in Sangan, 25 miles south of Danang, yesterday.

Three Vietnamese para troopers in the operation were killed, and one was wounded. Two other Americans were wounded in another operation.

The attack on the helicopters came down to the landing area, a swampy paddy field, last night.

Two Viet Cong held the base and were shielded by two other Viet Cong companies armed with mortars and heavy smaller weapons.

A pilot said he saw about 100 Viet Cong holding the landing site near the base, which is a small American offshore base.

Ian Smith's New Move

While the government of the Rhodesian Republic was-modeling national policies, Ian Smith, the prime minister, made a move that could shape the future of the country. Smith announced a new policy that would potentially bring about a change in the current political landscape. The move was significant enough to warrant close attention from both local and international observers.

The new policy involved several key elements that aimed to stabilize the economy and improve the standard of living for the people of Rhodesia. It was a bold step that required careful consideration and implementation to be successful. Smith's government was known for its strong sense of national identity, and this move could further solidify its stance against foreign influences.

Despite the potential challenges, the government was confident in its ability to execute the new policy effectively. Smith's leadership was expected to play a crucial role in ensuring the success of this endeavor. The people of Rhodesia watched with interest as the details of this new policy were revealed and awaited its impact on their daily lives.

Meanwhile, in neighboring countries, there were signs of growing unrest and tension. Diplomatic relations were strained, and the region remained vigilant, preparing for any developments that might affect the stability of the area. The global community was also closely following the events, eager to see how this new move would unfold and what implications it might have for the region and beyond.

Prime Minister States Government Policies On Planning, Investment, Agriculture

To ensure the country's progress and stability, the Prime Minister highlighted the importance of planning, investment, and agriculture. He emphasized the need for a cohesive strategy to address the challenges facing the nation and ensure economic growth.

"In this new year, we stand at the threshold of a new era. Our government's policies are designed to foster a balanced development, guiding the nation towards prosperity and peace. The focus on planning is crucial, as it allows us to align our efforts with the needs of the country. Investment in key sectors such as agriculture and industry will be prioritized to create a robust foundation for future growth. We will also continue to advocate for fair trade practices, ensuring that our products are competitive and our citizens are enriched.

"Agriculture remains a cornerstone of our economy. With its vast potential, it offers a path to self-sufficiency and a means to lift our people out of poverty. Our government is committed to supporting farmers, providing them with the tools they need to succeed. This will involve investments in research, education, and infrastructure, as well as initiatives to expand markets and increase access to finance.

"Together, we can build a brighter future for our nation. Let us work together, with a shared vision, to make this year a time of progress and achievement."

Administrative Malaise Or Economic Crisis? The Main Culprits

By MAMMAD H. SEIF

This article is a brief summary of the previous article about the recent situation in the Soviet Union. It highlights the problems facing the country and suggests possible solutions to address them.

The Soviet Union is facing a crisis due to the administrative malaise and economic shortcomings. The government has been unable to implement effective policies to tackle these issues.

The main culprits are:

1. Lack of accountability in government officials.
2. Inefficient and腐败的 bureaucracy.
3. Limited public participation in decision-making.
4. High levels of corruption and embezzlement.
5. Ignoring the needs and demands of the people.

The government must take urgent measures to address these problems and improve its performance. This includes increasing transparency, promoting accountability, and involving the public in decision-making processes. Only then can the Soviet Union overcome its current challenges and achieve long-term stability and prosperity.

Prime Minister explains government’s aims in education, taxation, administration

Administrative Malaise or Economic Crisis?

If we do these things, the whole fabric of society will be reorganized. The government has laid down the following steps to achieve this:

1. The government has decided to increase the budget for education, and steps will be taken to ensure that all children have access to education.

2. The government will introduce tax reforms to ensure fair distribution of wealth.

3. The government will work towards improving the administration to make it more efficient and responsive to the needs of the people.

London Studies New Move By Rhodesia's Prime Minister

KARIS, April 6--(News)--Rhodesia's Prime Minister, Ian Smith, announced today that the government was establishing a new capital in Southern Africa, which was established in 1962.

The decision to establish a new capital in Southern Africa was announced by Dr. Ian Smith in a statement to the country's constituents. He said the new capital would be established in Southern Africa and would be named after the southernmost point of Africa, the Cape of Good Hope.

Smith said that the new capital would be built on a site that had been selected by the government and would be located in a region that had been identified as a strategic location for the future development of Southern Africa.

The announcement was made at a press conference in Johannesburg, South Africa, where Smith said that the new capital would be built on a site that had been selected by the government and would be located in a region that had been identified as a strategic location for the future development of Southern Africa.

a Code Of Ethics For Political Parties In Afghanistan

TRUST AND DISCIPLINE

BY SHAHID RABEE

According to the American Ethical Union, political trusts are the most important of all political trusts; and political trust it is in the nature of every political party that it be established. This is the case with the American Ethical Union as its principle of political morality is the first principle of political morality. It is the first principle of political morality that is in the nature of every political party that it be established. The American Ethical Union is the principle of political morality in its nature of every political party that it be established. The principle of political morality is the first principle of political morality in the nature of every political party that it be established. It is the first principle of political morality that is the principle of political morality in the nature of every political party that it be established. It is the first principle of political morality that is the principle of political morality in the nature of every political party that it be established.

In this connection, the question of political morality is of the same importance to all political parties as is the principle of political morality. It is therefore necessary to consider the question of political morality in connection with the principle of political morality. This is the case with the American Ethical Union as its principle of political morality is the first principle of political morality. It is the first principle of political morality that is the principle of political morality in the nature of every political party that it be established. Sources of Revenue

On the one hand, the war in Afghanistan has caused tremendous financial difficulties for the country. The government has been forced to spend large amounts of money on military operations, which has resulted in a significant reduction in the government's revenue. On the other hand, the government has been unable to increase its revenue through various means, including the sale of state assets, the imposition of higher taxes, and the reduction of government spending. As a result, the government has been forced to borrow large amounts of money from international organizations and banks, which has increased its debt burden.

Individual Incentives And Productivity

The idea of a river depends on the density and on the rate of which the water flows. If the river flows at a rate, the density will increase and the river will move faster. This is because the density of the river is higher and the rate of flowing water is also higher. However, if the river flows at a slower rate, the density will decrease and the river will move slower. This is because the density of the river is lower and the rate of flowing water is also lower. Therefore, the density of the river depends on the rate of flowing water.

U.S. Welcomes Initiative by Non-aligned Nations Appealing for Vietnam Peace

The following is the text of Dr. Sihanouk's message to the United Nations: "We appeal to the governments of the world to respect the sovereignty, independence, territorial integrity and political equality of all countries, and to refrain from any action which may cause a recurrence of the war.

Dr. Sihanouk noted that the United States was responsible for the war in Vietnam and that the United Nations had been unable to prevent it.

Dr. Sihanouk also noted that the United Nations had been unable to prevent the United States from violating the Geneva Accords, which had ended the Vietnam War in 1975.

FARMERS' CONGRESS OPENS HERE

The 12th Asian and Pacific Conference on Agriculture opens here Monday as a new phase of efforts to meet the needs of the 1.8 billion people who live in the region's 23 countries.

Dr. Abdillah of Indonesia, the minister of agriculture, welcomed the delegates and stressed the importance of increasing food production in the region.

"We are here to discuss ways to increase food production," he said. "We must work together to ensure that everyone has enough to eat."
A Code Of Ethics For Political Parties In Afghanistan
PROBLEM OF POLITICAL EDUCATION

In our current era we acquire information that is not from our own sources, but from other people or by intuition. In this way we can infer that information is political. Currently, Afghanistan is a country that is unable to determine the political situation in its own country, let alone in the region. As a result, politics in Afghanistan is a product of political education that is done by the Ministry of Agriculture to develop a sense of ethics among political parties.

Agricultural Plans Presented To Congress Participants

HAB Light, April 30—Shah and Prime Minister His Highness Prince Sadruddin presented his plan for the development of the Afghan farming population, at the end of the fifth session of the Afghan city of Kabul.

The plan, which has been approved by the government and the Ministry of Agriculture, is aimed at increasing the country's agricultural output by 140 per cent. It also includes a project to improve breeds of livestock in the country.

The plan calls for the establishment of 10,000 new wildlife sanctuaries and the establishment of a foundation to support the Afghan farming population.

The plan also includes the construction of 10,000 new rural roads and the establishment of a foundation to support the Afghan farming population.

Need Of Self-Help

At yesterday’s session of the Foreign Commerce and Industry Committee, the members criticized the government’s efforts to promote export. They pointed out that the government should encourage private enterprise and not depend solely on official efforts.

In reply to the criticism, the government claimed that they had taken steps to encourage private enterprise. They also pointed out that the government was not in the position to take over the entire responsibility for the development of exports.

The committee members said that the government should be more active in promoting exports. They also suggested that the government should provide more information to the private sector on the foreign market conditions.

Japan May Mediate In Malaysia Dispute

Japan, in an attempt to mediate in the Malaysia dispute, has offered to bring both sides together for talks. The Malaysian government has accepted the offer and has expressed hope that the dispute can be resolved peacefully.

In return, the Malaysian government has offered to discuss the possibility of Japan investing in the country. The Japanese government has not yet responded to the offer.

Farhang Stresses Importance Of Free Transit
In Speech To UN Trade, Development Board

Farhang, from Afghanistan, stressed the importance of free transit in a speech to the UN Trade, Development Board meeting in New York. Farhang noted that free transit is essential for the development of poorer countries, as it allows them to export their goods to other countries without paying transit fees. This, in turn, will help these countries to improve their economies and increase their trade with other nations.

Farhang also mentioned that free transit can help to strengthen international relations and promote peace. He noted that by allowing countries to trade with each other, free transit can help to reduce tensions and conflicts.

Farhang urged the UN to work towards establishing a free transit system, which would benefit all countries. He emphasized that this would not only help poorer countries, but also benefit more developed nations by promoting trade and economic growth.

The article mentions that Soviet statisticians report total output in the USSR increased by 7 per cent during 1964. This is a significant statistic, highlighting economic growth and development in the country during that period.

For those interested in more such updates, they might want to stay tuned for further developments on this topic. The article might be part of a series or a regular update on economic indicators or statistical data in the region covered by Radio Afghanistan.

Meanwhile, the foreign services and western music segments are also included in the programme, suggesting a diverse range of content aimed at engaging a broad audience.

The emphasis on these figures comes at a time when historical records and data are often scrutinized, particularly in relation to economic policies and their impact on society. The growth in output could be seen as a sign of the economic health and progress of the country during that period. However, it's important to also consider the context in which these changes occurred, including the external factors that might have influenced the economic landscape of the time.

The information provided gives a glimpse into the communication strategies and content diversification efforts of the time, targeting different audiences with relevant and engaging content.

They have developed a donor-experience framework which requires more government intervention and technical skills. The framework is based on the experiences of donor organizations and their education programs. It involves collaboration and coordination between donors, recipient governments, and local stakeholders.

Another essential point is that the education system needs to be reformed. It must be able to adapt to the changing needs of society. This can be achieved through the development of new educational programs and the improvement of existing ones. It is crucial to ensure that education is accessible to all, regardless of their background or social status.

After The Genesa Conference
New International Economic Policy

Different from other economic policies that have been proposed in the past, the new international economic policy is focused on the development of a sustainable and inclusive economy. It recognizes the importance of reducing inequality and promoting social justice. The policy aims to create a level playing field for all countries, regardless of their size or level of development.

The policy advocates for the establishment of a global regulatory framework that would ensure fair and transparent trade practices. It also supports the development of new technologies that can help to reduce poverty and improve living standards.

DECENTRALISATION AND DEVOLUTION

By Phil Gourley

The system of the French Republic offers a good example. When in 1956, the French Senate approved the idea of a new French Metropole, to be called the Mediterranean Sea, it was a clear indication that the traditional hierarchy of central government was being replaced by a more decentralised system. The metropole would be made up of a number of smaller regions, each with its own elected assembly and elected governor. This would lead to a greater degree of local autonomy and a more efficient system of government.

This system is designed to be more flexible and responsive to local needs than the traditional centralised system. It is also intended to promote greater economic development and social well-being by giving local authorities more control over their own affairs.

The system is based on the principles of decentralisation and devolution, which are widely accepted in other countries as well. The key features of the system are:

1. A greater degree of local autonomy, with local authorities having more control over their own affairs.
2. Greater accountability, with local authorities being more responsible to the people they represent.
3. Greater efficiency, with local authorities being able to respond more quickly and effectively to the needs of their communities.
4. A more flexible approach, with local authorities having the ability to adapt to changing circumstances.

In conclusion, the system of the French Republic offers a good example of how decentralisation and devolution can lead to a more efficient and responsive system of government. Other countries can learn from this system and adopt similar principles to promote greater economic development and social well-being.

ELECTION IN RHODESIA

The United Front, led by Ian Smith, has won the election for the Rhodesian Parliament by a comfortable margin. The United Front managed to get 65% of the vote, while the conservative party only managed to get 35%. This is a clear indication of the popularity of the United Front's policies and its ability to appeal to a wide range of voters.

The result of the election is a clear victory for the United Front, which is likely to strengthen its position in the country. The party has made a clear commitment to maintain the status quo and to resist any attempts to interfere with the country's independence.

Soviets Launch First Satellite For Communications

The Soviet Union has launched its first satellite for communications. The satellite, called Sputnik, was launched into a low Earth orbit and is intended to be used for communications and navigation purposes.

The launch of the satellite is a significant milestone in the development of the Soviet Union's space programme. It shows the country's commitment to developing its space capabilities and its ability to compete with other major powers in this field.

The satellite is expected to provide a wide range of services, including communications, navigation, and weather monitoring. It is also expected to be used for scientific research and exploration.

In conclusion, the launch of the satellite is a significant achievement for the Soviet Union. It shows the country's commitment to developing its space capabilities and its ability to compete with other major powers in this field.

Kabul High School and other educational institutions.

Premier Yousuf Khan visited the Khorasani Animal Science Institute in Moscow, where he was shown samples of the institute's work, including the production of milk and meat. He was also shown the institute's facilities, including its laboratories and classrooms.

The institute, which was established in 1954, is one of the largest in the Soviet Union. It has a capacity of 6,000 students and offers courses in veterinary medicine, agriculture, and animal science.

Premier Yousuf Khan said that the institute's work was important for the development of Afghanistan's agricultural sector. He praised the institute's efforts to improve the quality of Afghan beef and said that the Afghan government was working to establish similar institutes in the country.

The visit was part of the Afghan government's efforts to improve relations with the Soviet Union, which is Afghanistan's largest trading partner. The two countries have a long history of cooperation, dating back to the Soviet occupation of Afghanistan in the 1980s.

Premier Speaks At Friendship Meeting

Editor's Note: Following is the complete text of Premier Babrak Karmal's address at the International Friendship Meeting of Afghan-Asian People held at the National Stadium in Kabul yesterday.

The right of the people to self-determination, the principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs, the right of every nation to live in peace was enshrined in the charters of the UN and other international organizations. This right and principle has been respected and honoured by the Soviet Union and by the unity of the Socialist countries. This is a policy of justice. This is a policy of peace, this is a policy of progress. This is a policy of friendship. This is the policy of all the socialist countries and this is the policy of the Soviet Union. This is the policy of the Afghan people. This is a policy of the people of Asia, Africa, and Latin America. This is a policy of the people of the world.

The international congresses of workers and the International Committee of the International Council of Communist Parties have repeatedly reaffirmed the principle of non-interference in the internal affairs of states, the right of every nation to live in peace, and the right of every nation to self-determination. The right of the Afghan people to self-determination, to live in peace, to create their own economic, cultural, and political life, is a right of all the peoples of the world.

The Afghan people have every right to live in peace and to create their own economic, cultural, and political life. Code of Ethics For Political Parties in Afghanistan

SCAPEGOATISM AND CRYPTOISM

We have all heard the news of the day. We know that the government is not doing its job and that we need a new leader. However, there are two different sides to the story. On one hand, there is the government, which is responsible for running the country. On the other hand, there are the political parties, which are responsible for representing the interests of their constituents. In Afghanistan, the political parties often use scapegoatism and cryptoism to achieve their goals.

Scapegoatism is the act of blaming others for one's own shortcomings. In Afghanistan, the political parties often blame the government for all the problems facing the country. However, it is important to remember that the government is not the only one responsible for these problems. The political parties also have a role to play in creating solutions.

Cryptoism is the act of concealing one's identity or true intentions. In Afghanistan, the political parties often use cryptoism to avoid responsibility for their actions. They will say things to the public that they don't mean to do, in order to avoid being held accountable for their mistakes.

RISE AND FALL OF THE EXCHANGE RATE

The dollar became their icon in the scientific community, and their exchange rate of 1.5 to 1 was the state bank. The rules that set this exchange rate have long been a source of contention, and the recent move to allow market forces to determine the price has been a source of conflict. In the long run, this move will likely lead to a more stable and efficient market, but in the short term, it has caused a lot of uncertainty and volatility.

The dollar's value has been declining steadily, and this has had a significant impact on the economy. On the one hand, it has made imports more affordable, which has helped to stimulate consumer spending. On the other hand, it has made exports more expensive, which has hurt US competitiveness. The government has been trying to address this issue by increasing interest rates, which has made borrowing more expensive and reduced consumer spending. However, this has also led to a decline in the housing market, which has further impacted the economy.

The exchange rate is a crucial determinant of the economy, and it is important to understand its underlying causes and implications. The government needs to be proactive in managing the exchange rate, and it must be prepared to intervene if necessary. The dollar's decline is a complex issue, and it will require a multifaceted approach to address it.
Israel Fears Armed Clash Over Use Of Jordan Waters

JERUSALEM, Israel Sector, April 28, (Reuter).—

A 650-tonne patrol vessel, the former Argentine Navy frigate, has been sunk in the Jordan River, Israel, near the border with Jordan, and the Jordanian authorities are reported to be planning to use the vessel as a floating military base.

The frigate, which was captured by Israeli forces in 1967, has been refitted and armed with heavy artillery.

A Jordanian naval officer said that the vessel will be used as a defensive position in the event of a military clash with Israel.

The vessel is armed with a 155-mm gun and several machine guns.

The Israeli authorities have not commented on the incident.
