World conference on Human Settlement opens in Vancouver

VANCOUVER, June 1, (Reuters)—Canadian Prime Minister Pierre

L. Trudeau, holding ever louder the bell that the countries of the world had entered an era of crisis through which they must work together for the common interest.

He made the remark in the opening delivery at the opening ses-tion of the conference on human settlement held in Vancouver.

Some 120 countries are taking part in this unprecedented effort to answer the question of how and where people are going to be housed in the next 25 years—a period which will see the first 1 billion people.

Britain and

Iceland begin talks to solve fishing dispute

OLDA, June 1, (AP)—Britain and Iceland, who have been fighting over fish for five years, began their latest round of war during a meeting of the International Whaling Commission in Vienna.

The talks were described as the most important of the month, as they could end over the 100,000-ton catches by fishermen in both countries.

Negotiations had failed during the nine previous rounds of talks, but now it was hoped that a solution could be found.

In London, Foreign Secretary Michael Heseltine said: "We do not see any fear of the talks; the talks are purely protective. We want the two countries in February to agree to a new period. Apparently the European delegates, quickly gave the two sides a new breath of hope."

ECONOMIC DIVERSIFICATION

Affirmative actions are required for the country to move to a stage where it can consider itself as a developed one. There is a need to diversify the economy, move from the production of raw materials to manufacturing and the production of value-added products. The country has the potential to produce a variety of goods, including textiles, pharmaceuticals, and electronics. The government should provide incentives to businesses that invest in these sectors. One step towards this direction is the creation of special economic zones in areas with a high concentration of skilled labor. The government should also focus on developing the financial sector to support these efforts. In this context, it is noteworthy that Japan recently released secret documents that outline the country’s foreign policy, which may include investment in Afghanistan.

AFGHAN PRESS

The Ministry of Agriculture is responsible for developing the agricultural sector, which remains a critical component of the country’s economy. The government should encourage private investment in this sector by providing incentives to farmers and by creating a favorable environment for agricultural export promotion. This will help increase the productivity of the sector and bring in foreign exchange. The government has also proposed changes to land taxation, which may be a positive step towards improving the sector.

WORLD PRESS

The United States is set to cease all aid to Afghanistan in 2021. This decision is expected to have a significant impact on the country’s economy, as the aid has been a crucial source of funding for various sectors. The government will need to focus on diversifying the economy and developing alternative sources of revenue. The country will also need to create a stable political environment to attract foreign investment. The impact of the pandemic and the economic downturn has made it crucial for the government to focus on developing new segments of the economy.

IN OUR STRANGE WORLD

The pandemic has had a profound impact on the economy, with many sectors facing challenges. The tourism industry has been hit particularly hard, with borders closed and travel restrictions in place. However, the digital economy has shown resilience, with many businesses adapting to new models. The government needs to work towards boosting the digital economy by investing in infrastructure and providing incentives to businesses. The pandemic has also highlighted the need for better public health systems, which requires increased investment in healthcare. The government needs to ensure that the healthcare sector receives the necessary funding to cope with future challenges.

100 reported killed as protest riots spread in S. Africa

"AFRICA, June 19, (AP) - At least 100 demonstrators were killed and many others wounded in rioting that spread throughout the Transvaal, South Africa, police said yesterday.

In Johannesburg, the worst violence since the student rebellion last fall, some 60 people died and 200 were injured.

The clashes began when police tried to prevent a 10,000-strong crowd from reaching the U.S. Embassy in central Johannesburg at the end of a march to demand the release of political prisoners.

Police said the crowd hurled rocks, torches and even gasoline at the police and that they returned fire. Ten police officers were reported injured.

Another group of rioters tried to break into a hospital in the suburb of Jeppestown and a demonstration in Pretoria was broken up by police.

In a separate action in Pretoria, 30 students were arrested and charged with riot after they attacked a group of white rioters.

"AFRICA, June 18, (AP) - South African police said they have arrested 20 persons and charged them with rioting after clashes in Pretoria.

The violence, which broke out after a demonstration by a group of black students, was described as one of the worst in recent years.

The students had been protesting against the government's policy of forcing them to study in English instead of their native languages.
