Kabul outlines youth tasks for building new society

KABUL, June 1 (Bakhtar) - Rahbar Karim, General Secretary of the PDPA CC and Prime Minister of the new government, has outlined youth tasks for building a new society.

The former youth advisor, in his capacity as Prime Minister, laid down the following tasks for the youth:

1. To maintain the gains of the struggle for freedom achieved under the leadership of the Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA).
2. To strengthen national unity and solidarity among the Afghan people.
3. To promote education and literacy among the youth.
4. To ensure the implementation of the principles of democracy and human rights.
5. To promote cultural and artistic activities among the youth.
6. To encourage the youth to participate in the development of the country.
7. To ensure the protection of the rights of the youth.

The Rahbar's speech was hailed by the youth as a clear program for the building of a new society. The youth pledged to work for the realization of these tasks.
CHILDREN IN THE 1980s
FUTURE CAN BE BETTER THAN THE PAST

By Juan Del Carcans

What future can the child of today have for himself and for his/her children? This question is under discussion in the United Nations. The theme of Universal Children’s Day 1979 is: “Children in the 1980s: Future Can Be Better Than the Past.”

The theme of the UNICEF publication “Children of the 1980s: Future Can Be Better Than the Past” is: “Let the children of the world have the same opportunities as you and me.”

The goal of this theme is to promote the realization of the rights of the child by the states parties to the United Nations. This goal can be achieved by recognizing that children have the right to be protected from physical, mental, moral, and spiritual harm; the right to be educated; the right to be employed; the right to participate in political and economic decision-making; and the right to be free from discrimination.

Universal Children’s Day

Universal Children’s Day is observed on November 20th every year. It is a day to remember the rights of the child. It is a day to celebrate the achievements of the child. It is a day to mark the “right” of the child to grow and develop to the fullness of their potential.

Observation on issues discussed at XI Islamic Conference

The XI Islamic Conference was held in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia, from November 16th to November 20th, 1979. The conference was attended by representatives of 30 countries, including Afghanistan, Algeria, Bangladesh, and Cuba.

The conference discussed a number of issues, including the rights of the child, education, and the role of women in development.

The conference adopted a number of resolutions, including a resolution on the rights of the child, which states: “Children are entitled to the respect of their parents, family, and society, and to the protection of the law. They are entitled to the right to life, to freedom from exploitation, to education, and to participation in the economic, social, cultural, and political life of their country.

The conference also adopted a resolution on the role of women in development, which states: “Women are entitled to equal rights with men in all spheres of life. They should have the right to participate in the economic, political, social, and cultural life of their countries.

The conference concluded with a call for action to promote the rights of the child and to improve the status of women in development.

A number of locally made and imported arms, made in US, Britain, FRG and China, seized from the forward in various parts of the country. These weapons are sent into Afghanistan to help the Afghan people.
Imperialists continue with their vile designs

The Imperialists have been intensifying their efforts to subvert and destabilize the Afghan government and resistance movements. They are utilizing various tactics, including economic sanctions, propaganda, and proxy wars, to undermine the Afghan resistance and support the continuation of the status quo. This is evident through the recent actions of the US and its allies, who have been providing military aid and training to the Afghan government forces. The Imperialists are also funding and arming extremist groups who are carrying out violent attacks against the Afghan people and leadership. These actions are part of a larger strategy to maintain their control over the region and protect their interests.

In 1980, the Imperialists' continued support for the Afghan government was to prevent the spread of communism and to maintain their influence in the region. Today, their actions are aimed at maintaining their economic and strategic interests in the region. The Imperialists' use of proxy wars and economic sanctions to undermine the Afghan government is an example of their continued efforts to maintain their control and influence.

Imperialists' devastating weapons on exhibition

The Imperialists have been displaying their devastating weapons to demonstrate their capability to cause widespread destruction and to intimidate and destabilize the Afghan government and resistance movements. These weapons include nuclear, chemical, and biological weapons, which are capable of causing massive destruction and loss of life. The exhibition of these weapons is a clear indication of the Imperialists' commitment to maintaining their military dominance and to using their weapons to achieve their objectives.

In 1980, the Imperialists used their military power to support the Afghan government and to provide military aid to the Afghan government forces. Today, their actions are aimed at maintaining their military superiority and to use their weapons to intimidate and destabilize the Afghan government and resistance movements. The display of these weapons is an example of the Imperialists' continued efforts to maintain their military dominance and to use their weapons to achieve their objectives.

Eradication of Underdevelopment—a Major Requirement of Progress

Eradication of underdevelopment is a major requirement of progress. The Imperialists have been working to address the issue of underdevelopment in the region. They have been providing economic aid and development assistance to the Afghan government and resistance movements to help them achieve economic growth and progress. The Imperialists' efforts have been instrumental in helping to reduce poverty and improve living standards in the region.

In 1980, the Imperialists provided economic aid to the Afghan government to help them achieve economic growth and progress. Today, their actions are aimed at maintaining their economic dominance and to use their economic aid to achieve their objectives. Indian Ocean must become a zone of peace

By A. H. Malik

A regular session of the United Nations Special Committee on the Indian Ocean (SCIO) starts today in New York. Minister for Foreign Affairs, Mr. Walid bin Mohamed bin Sultan Al Qasimi, representative of the United Arab Emirates, will be present. He said that the Indian Ocean is the common concern of the United Nations membership and that the United Arab Emirates is committed to the maintenance of peace and the respect for the sovereignty and territorial integrity of all countries.

The Indian Ocean is one of the largest bodies of water on earth and covers an area of 20 million square kilometers. It is bordered by the east coast of Africa, the west coast of Australia, and the Indian subcontinent. It is an important area for trade and transportation, and any conflict in the area could have serious implications for the global economy.

Effective treatment for ADD patients

By Dr. Yousuf F. Shafiq

Attention Deficit Disorder (ADD) is a common problem among children and adults. It can be a challenging condition to manage, but there are effective treatments available. One of the most common treatments for ADD is medication. The most commonly prescribed medication for ADD is Ritalin, which is an abbreviation for methylphenidate.

Adderall is another medication that is often prescribed for ADD. It is a combination of two stimulants, amphetamine and dextroamphetamine. It works by increasing the amount of dopamine and norepinephrine in the brain, which can help improve focus and concentration.

In addition to medication, there are other treatments available for ADD. Behavioral therapy, such as cognitive-behavioral therapy, can be very effective in helping people learn new skills and manage their symptoms. Occupational therapy can also be helpful, as it can help people develop new skills and strategies for managing their daily activities.

Imperialists...
The transfer of power from the oppressive ruling class and feudal lords to the working people workers peasants and others has been a turning point in the life of Afghan people. Now that the power is wielded by the working class represented by the People’s Democratic Party of Afghanistan (PDPA), the people are fully convinced that whatever decision is made by the government and PDPA is in the interest of the masses and the majority of people who produce all the material wealth in the Afghan society. It is a matter of pride for the toilers and working people of Afghanistan to have eventually established their sovereignty and authority in the country. The strength of the working class rests in the interests and objectives of all the democratic strata or the absolute majority of the country in the decisions which are now made collectively by the leadership the feudalists and exploiters and other exploiters have no voice. The close link existing between the working people and its political organization, the People’s Democratic Party of Afghanistan, convinces everyone that the entire power of the state machinery is directed towards the prosperity and happiness of large masses of working people who constitute the backbone of the society.

The workers are fortunate to be organized in trade unions and the peasants are taking part in the peasant cooperatives and assisting funds in addition to adopting measures to boost up production and increase the income of the workers. In this field, the Workers’ Unions of Afghanistan have acquired the membership of the International Federation of Workers’ Unions and are now trying to come into contact with Workers’ Unions of other countries so that they can discuss their common problems and learn from each other’s experiences to raise the standard of their members and strengthen their influence and position in the development of various spheres of life of the working people.
Public health should contribute to the socio-econ. development

Afghan delegates participate at UNICEF Executive Board meeting

INT'L PRESS

The Executive Board of UNICEF has met here this week to discuss the implementation of the UNICEF programme in Afghanistan. The meeting was attended by delegates from several countries, including Afghanistan, who presented their views on the situation in their respective countries. The delegates discussed the need for increased support for the UNICEF programme in Afghanistan, which is facing severe challenges due to the ongoing conflict.

At the family court

The family court in Kabul has been hearing cases involving women and children. The court has been receiving an increasing number of cases, and the judges have been working to provide justice to these vulnerable populations. The court has been supported by the Afghan government and international organizations, which have provided training and resources to the judges.

Women and back-biting

BY I. B. RASHEED

Women in Afghanistan are often subjected to back-biting and gossip. This can be a severe problem, as it can damage their reputation and undermine their ability to participate fully in society. The problem is exacerbated by the lack of legal protection for women, which makes it difficult for them to take legal action against those who spread false information about them.

The Soviet Union expresses full solidarity with Afghan people

KABUL, June 22 (AFP) - The Soviet Union has expressed its full solidarity with the Afghan people. The statement was made by the Soviet ambassador to Afghanistan, who visited the country to meet with government officials and representatives of civil society. The ambassador emphasized the importance of international cooperation in the fight against terrorism and emphasized the need for a comprehensive approach to solving the crisis in Afghanistan.

CIA prepares military provocations

By Dr. John Baker

The working world of the CIA has always been a mystery to most people. The agency's operations have often been shrouded in secrecy and mystery, with little information available about its activities. However, in recent years, there have been several instances where the CIA has been involved in military provocations, and these have raised concerns about its role in international relations.

Western propaganda has long been fascinated with the idea of a CIA intervention in major conflicts. The agency has been accused of involvement in various military actions, and its activities have been scrutinized by the international community.

In recent years, the CIA has been accused of involvement in military provocations in several regions. These include the Middle East, where the agency is believed to have played a role in the Iran-Iraq war, and Africa, where it is believed to have been involved in conflicts in various countries. The CIA has also been accused of involvement in military attacks in the Americas, including the War on Terror.

The agency's involvement in military provocations has raised concerns among the international community. Many countries have called for an end to the CIA's activities, and there have been calls for greater transparency in its operations.

In conclusion, the CIA's involvement in military provocations poses a significant risk to international relations. It is crucial that the agency's activities are closely monitored and that its operations are transparent to the international community.

Third world needs, requirements

As societies in the developing world struggle to meet the demands of a growing population, the need for resources and infrastructure is becoming increasingly evident. This is particularly true in the third world, where the challenges of poverty, disease, and lack of education are common.

In order to address these challenges, it is essential to develop effective policies and programs that can help meet the needs of the populations affected. This requires a commitment to investment in education, health care, and infrastructure.

The success of any such efforts depends on a commitment to long-term goals and a willingness to address the underlying causes of poverty and inequality. It is crucial that these efforts are not hindered by political or economic pressures, and that they are supported by the international community.

In conclusion, the needs of the third world are significant, and it is essential that efforts are made to address them in a sustainable and effective manner. This requires a commitment to long-term goals and a willingness to work towards a better future for all.

The growing hysteria of US imperialism

By Ahmed Mustafa

The growing hysteria of US imperialism is a manifestation of the deep-seated fear that the US is vulnerable to the consequences of its own policies. The US, with its vast military and economic power, has been a frequent target of criticism from around the world. The US has been accused of imposing its will on other countries through military intervention, economic sanctions, and other forms of aggression. The US has also been criticized for its role in the spread of terrorism and for its support of authoritarian regimes.

Japan's parliamentary election results

Japan's parliamentary election results have been announced, with the ruling Liberal Democratic Party (LDP) winning a majority of seats. The LDP has been in power for most of the past few decades, and its victory is a sign of the continued popularity of the prime minister, Shinzo Abe. The LDP's victory is also a sign of the country's economic strength, as Japan has been one of the world's leading economies for many years.

And it was "Eid of Ramadan"

A short story by Abu Reza

The story is about a young boy who is preparing for Eid, the Islamic holiday of forgiveness and renewal. The boy is excited about the prospect of breaking fast with his family and enjoying the traditional food. However, he is also concerned about the political situation in his country, which is facing a difficult time. The story is a reminder of the importance of maintaining a sense of perspective in the face of adversity.

BIRDS, ANIMALS AND FOLK IDEAS

There is still a fire in the heart of the world, a spark of hope that is destined to ignite the flames of change. The bird of hope flies high above the clouds, a symbol of freedom and transformation. The animals of the world, with their unique abilities and characteristics, are a testament to the beauty and diversity of creation. Folk ideas, passed down through generations, are a reminder of the importance of tradition and the power of the human spirit.
