Belgians In The Then And Now

As he watched the storm over the oaks, hearing the Heilige Deams, the old soldier, who had served in the Belgian Army for over 40 years, recalled the days of Belgium's independence. He remembered the Battle of Waterloo and the glory of the Belgian Army. His eyes filled with tears as he spoke:

"Belgium has its Heroes. Mr. Thomas, its King. During the fighting with the Allied Armies, Belgium was a beacon of light in the darkness of war. It is a country that has suffered and sacrificed for the freedom of the world."

He paused, and the wind howled through the trees, reminding him of the courage of his fellow soldiers. "Belgium is a country that has overcome great adversity. It has withstood the test of time, and its spirit is unbreakable."

As the storm cleared, the old soldier continued:

"Belgium's independence is a symbol of hope. It is a reminder that even in the darkest of times, there is always a chance for victory."
