EARLY SOLUTION TO ALGERIA'S POLITICAL CRISIS EXPECTED

ALGERIA, July 23 (AP) - The Algerian Information Ministry on Thursday urged the immediate resignation of President Mohammed Boumedienne, expressing optimism in Algeria's political crisis. The ministry called for Boumedienne's resignation and the establishment of a new government to address the country's political crisis.

The ministry criticized the government's handling of the crisis, saying that it had failed to address the concerns of the people. It called for a new government to be formed, consisting of representatives from all political parties, to work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The ministry also expressed support for the protesters and called on the government to engage in dialogue with them. It stressed the importance of respecting the rights of the people and ensuring their participation in the decision-making process.

In a letter to the seven-member committee of the Algerian Constitutional Council, Minister of the Interior and Prime Minister Mohamed Bouchikhi, said that Algeria is facing a moment of its history that requires the commitment of all its citizens.

The letter called on the country's leadership to work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis and to ensure the respect of human rights. It also urged the government to take steps to address the economic and social challenges facing the country.

In the wake of the recent political developments, Algeria's political crisis has sparked widespread protests and demonstrations across the country. The protesters are calling for the resignation of Boumedienne and the formation of a new government.

In an interview with a local news outlet, Prime Minister Bouchikhi said that the government would not tolerate any form of violence or ancora.

The ministry also noted that the government had already taken steps to address the economic and social challenges facing the country. It called on the protesters to engage in dialogue with the government and to work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

The ministry expressed hope that the new government would be formed and that it would work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis. It called on all political parties to participate in the formation of the new government.

In a statement, the ministry said that the government was committed to respecting the rights of the people and ensuring their participation in the decision-making process. It also called on all political parties to support the new government and to work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis.

In conclusion, the ministry expressed optimism in Algeria's political crisis and called on all political parties to work towards a peaceful resolution of the crisis. It also urged the protesters to engage in dialogue with the government and to participate in the formation of the new government.
