HERAT'S DEVELOPMENT POSSIBILITIES

By KARAY

A historical aspect of the development of Afghanistan's industries, and particularly its textile industries, is illustrated in the current situation of the city of Herat. The city is known for its traditional weaving and textile industries, which have been a significant part of its economy for centuries. The city is home to several textile factories, and the industry is a major contributor to the local economy.

In my last article, I discussed the historical development of industries in the province. The province of Herat has a rich industrial heritage, and the textile industry is one of its major contributors. The city of Herat is known for its traditional weaving and textile industries, which have been a significant part of its economy for centuries.

The people of Herat are proud of their rich cultural heritage and the tradition of textile weaving in the region. The city is home to several textile factories, and the industry is a major contributor to the local economy.

The Ministry of Economic Development and Commerce is committed to supporting the development of the textile industry in Herat. The ministry has launched several initiatives to promote the growth of the industry, including providing financial assistance, training programs, and marketing support.

The industry in Herat is gradually gaining momentum, and the government is working to create a favorable environment for its growth. The ministry is committed to ensuring that the industry continues to thrive, and it is working closely with the local authorities to address any challenges that may arise.

DISARM ACCORD ESSENTIAL FOR PEACE
German-Polish
Communiqué

BERLIN, Oct. 25 (Bloomberg) — In a joint communique today, the Federal Republic of Germany and Poland said they would continue talks in Washington on the American-German arms control accord and would continue talks with the United States, which is also a party to the accord, on the accord's implementation.

Both sides considered the accord as an important element of Western co-operation. The accord was signed in Moscow on December 8, 1979, and entered into force on August 1, 1980.

The accord calls for a two-year review of the implementation of the accord's provisions, including a review of the implementation of the accord's provisions relating to the reduction of nuclear and conventional weapons.

The accord was signed by the United States and the Federal Republic of Germany, and was also signed by the Soviet Union and the United Kingdom.

The accord was seen as an important step in the process of reducing the risk of nuclear war and improving relations between the two superpowers.

The accord was seen as a major achievement of the Carter administration, and was seen as a significant step forward in the arms control negotiations that had been ongoing since the mid-1970s.
