Main Reason For U.S.A. TO LAUNCH NEW TELSTAR NEXT WEEK
WASHINGTON Dec. 3 (Reuter) — Another communication satellite, which will be used to inject satelline programmes across the Atlantic, is to be launched from Cape Canaveral next week, it was disclosed yesterday.

The Secretary-General of the United Nations may become a member of the International Administrative Committee of the satellite. The United Nations cannot be represented by a full delegate, but a special seat is somehow to be found.

The Secretary-General is expected to come to Washington for the launching, which is timed to coincide with the annual United Nations conference, and will probably be presented with a model of the satellite.

He will be welcomed by Mr. John F. Kennedy, President of the United States, and the President of the United States will present him with a model of the satellite.

Disarmament
Urgent Task Of All Peoples, Says GDR

PAXIS, Dec. 4 (AP)—The German Democratic Republic, capital of the GDR, has announced that it will seek a more rapid and comprehensive approach to disarmament.

The statement was made by Dr. Friderich Fisch, the Minister of State, who stated that the GDR was committed to the principles of disarmament as set forth in the United Nations Charter. However, he emphasized that a more rapid and comprehensive approach was necessary in order to meet the challenges of the present day.

The GDR has long been a proponent of disarmament and has consistently called for the reduction of nuclear weapons. However, the recent events in the Middle East have made the GDR even more determined to pursue this goal.

The statement was met with approval by the United Nations Security Council, which praised the GDR for its commitment to disarmament.

The statement was also welcomed by many other countries, who praised the GDR for its commitment to peace and cooperation.

In related news, the GDR has announced that it will seek to increase its military budget in order to support its disarmament efforts.

U.S. MOVE TO INCREASE COMBAT READINESS

Streamlining of Reserve Forces Planned

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4 (AP)—The Department of Defense is planning to streamline the reserve forces in order to increase combat readiness. The plan is expected to be implemented in the next year.

The reserve forces currently make up a large portion of the U.S. military, but they have been criticized for their effectiveness in recent conflicts. The plan is expected to address these concerns and improve the readiness of the reserve forces.

The plan involves the reduction of the reserve forces by 10 percent, which will result in a significant reduction in the number of reserve personnel. However, the plan is expected to be implemented in a way that will not affect the overall strength of the military.

Nuclear test ban talks

To Become First
Sea Lord Of Britain

London, Dec. 4 (Reuters)—The British government has announced the appointment of Admiral Sir Alan West as the new Sea Lord of the Royal Navy. This is a significant step towards nuclear disarmament, as it is the first time that a British government has appointed a non-military person to this position.

Admiral West, who has served in the Royal Navy for over 30 years, has been tasked with overseeing the development of the navy's nuclear weapons systems. This is a significant departure from previous government policies, which have been more focused on military matters.

The appointment is seen as a significant step towards nuclear disarmament, as it is the first time that a British government has appointed a non-military person to this position. It is hoped that this will encourage other countries to follow suit.
