A U.N. Session That Survived Peril of War Over Cuba

The General Assembly near the close of its current session, last week, was criticized for its failure to take action on the crisis in the Gulf of of Tiga, Cuba. The Assembly did not take action on the crisis in the Gulf of Tonin, Cuba, but did pass a resolution condemning the action of the U.S. in sending troops to the island.

The U.S. and Cuba have been in a dispute over the island for several weeks, with the U.S. stating that it has the right to intervene in the island's affairs. Cuba has denied this and has accused the U.S. of interference in its internal affairs.

The U.S. has threatened to use military force if Cuba does not allow the U.S. to withdraw its troops from the island. Cuba has also threatened to use force if the U.S. does not withdraw its troops.

The crisis continues to worsen, with both sides increasing their military presence in the area. It is unclear how long the situation will continue and what steps will be taken to resolve the conflict.

A Radio Program on the Great March for Peace

The radio program 'Great March for Peace' will be broadcast this week. The program aims to raise awareness about the importance of peace and to encourage people to take action to promote peace in their communities.

The program will feature discussions with various peace activists and leaders, as well as musical performances and speeches. The program will air on Sunday, at 6 p.m. local time.

The program is part of a wider campaign to promote peace and to encourage people to take action to create a more peaceful world. The campaign is supported by various organizations and individuals who are committed to peace and justice.

A Call to Action for Peace

A call to action for peace has been issued, urging people to take steps to promote peace and to work towards a world free of conflict and violence.

The call to action calls on individuals, communities, and organizations to take action to promote peace in their lives and in their communities. It encourages people to engage in dialogue, to listen to each other, and to work towards understanding and respect.

The call to action also calls on governments and international organizations to work towards a world free of conflict and violence. It urges them to prioritize peace and to take action to prevent conflicts from arising and to resolve conflicts that do arise.

The call to action is a call to action for all of us to work towards a world free of conflict and violence, where people of all backgrounds can live together in peace and harmony.

U.N. Assembly Votes
Resolution

NEW YORK, Dec. 9 (AP)—The U.N. General Assembly yesterday endorsed an international trade conference in 1964 to solve trade problems between the United States and other nations.

The vote was 81-21, with 28 votes for abstention. The Congress for Eastern Europe and the Communist bloc agents of the U.S. did not vote. The two countries that opposed the resolution were China and the Soviet Union.

The assembly broke down the world into the two zones of trade—Western and Eastern—by the General Assembly vote. The Western bloc, which includes all nations except China and the Soviet Union, voted 78-1 on the resolution in favor of the 1964 trade conference in New York.

The Chinese and the Soviet Union voted against the resolution. The Western nations, including the United States, voted in favor of the resolution and condemned the Chinese and the Soviet Union's policy of boycotting the General Assembly.

The Western nations want a U.N. trade conference to discuss the problems of international trade. The Chinese and the Soviet Union oppose the Western nations because they fear that the Western nations would dominate the conference and try to force the Chinese to change their economic policies.

The Western nations want a U.N. trade conference because they believe that the Chinese and the Soviet Union are preventing the free flow of goods and services between the Western nations and the Eastern bloc.
