President Tshombe of Katanga, second-largest territory in Africa, has accepted the United Nations' ultimatum to accept the resumption of constitutional activities in Katanga and has said that he is ready to step down as secessionist leader of his province.

Tshombe's acceptance of the United Nations' ultimatum was announced in a statement read out by the United Nations while he is meeting in Katanga. The statement said that Tshombe has decided to step down as leader of the Katanga province and to accept the resumption of constitutional activities in the province.

The United Nations' ultimatum stipulated that Tshombe must accept the resumption of constitutional activities in Katanga and step down as secessionist leader of the province. Tshombe's acceptance of the ultimatum is a significant development in the ongoing conflict in Katanga.

In a separate development, the United Nations has announced that it will begin to deploy peacekeepers to Katanga to help maintain order and protect civilians.

The United Nations' decision to deploy peacekeepers is a welcome development, as it will help to prevent further violence and instability in Katanga.

In related news, the International Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies have announced that they will begin to provide humanitarian aid to people affected by the conflict in Katanga.

The International Red Cross and Red Crescent Societies are well-known humanitarian organizations that provide aid and assistance to people affected by conflict and other crises.

U.S. Officials Hail Delay of European Union

ADOUA, Feb. 2 (UPI) - Adoula, the prime minister of the United Republic of Chad, has sent a memo to the parliament requesting a vacation for the legislators. This is reportedly a routine procedure to keep the parliament in session during the rainy season. According to the prime minister, this will ensure that the parliament is not disrupted by rains and other weather-related issues.

The memo suggests that the parliament should meet for a month or less to discuss important issues. The prime minister also mentioned that the parliament would be able to work effectively during this period.
