KABUL, June 11. — President Abolhad, Secretary of the Communist Party of Iran, was yesterday in Kabul to discuss matters of mutual concern with the Afghan authorities. The meeting was attended by both delegations from Iran and Afghanistan. Both leaders expressed their desire to strengthen the existing friendship and cooperation between the two countries. They also exchanged views on various regional and international issues of mutual interest.

The Afghan delegation was led by President Abolhad, while the Iranian delegation was headed by Mr. Ali Akbar Hashemi Rafsanjani, the President of the Islamic Republic of Iran. The meeting took place in the Prime Minister's Office, where the leaders exchanged views on a range of topics, including trade, investment, and cultural exchanges.

Both leaders emphasized the importance of fostering strong ties between the two countries, which would contribute to regional peace and stability. They agreed to continue their efforts to further strengthen their bilateral relationship and to explore new avenues for cooperation in various fields.

The meeting concluded with a press conference, where both leaders reiterated their commitment to strengthening the existing friendship and cooperation between Afghanistan and Iran. They expressed confidence in the prospects of further enhancing bilateral relations in the years to come.

In his closing remarks, President Abolhad stressed the importance of mutual respect and understanding, which would facilitate the realization of shared objectives. He also thanked the Afghan government for providing him with a warm welcome and a hospitable environment, which allowed for meaningful discussions.

The meeting was a significant step in advancing the relationship between Afghanistan and Iran, and it is expected to pave the way for further cooperation and mutual benefits for both countries.
ON SPEED OF POLITICAL CHANGE

THE LANGUAGE PRESS

AT A GLANCE

Perhaps it will be said that the change is expected, and that the pace at which it is taking place is also expected. But it is important to remember that the pace at which changes in political and social structures take place is always subject to change. The change may be faster or slower than expected. The pace at which changes take place can be influenced by a variety of factors, including international events, economic conditions, and cultural trends.

In question of the pace of change, it is often difficult to determine whether a change is expected or unexpected. Sometimes, changes may occur in ways that are not anticipated, either because they are sudden or because they are subtle. Other times, changes may be expected, either because they are gradual or because they are the result of deliberate planning.

In some cases, changes may be expected because they are a natural part of the process of development. For example, changes in technology may be expected as a natural part of the process of technological progress. Other times, changes may be expected because they are the result of deliberate planning. For example, changes in government policies may be expected as a result of deliberate planning by political leaders.

Whatever the case may be, it is important to remember that the pace of change is always subject to change. Changes in political and social structures can be expected, either because they are expected to occur or because they are the result of deliberate planning. Regardless of whether changes are expected or unexpected, it is important to be aware of them and to be prepared to respond to them.

TALKS IN MOSCOW

After almost five years of war against the three nation bloc, the Soviet Union is taking a new approach to the way it has tried by agreeing to hold high level talks with the U.S. The talks have been held with universal acclaim, and the two superpowers have already begun to work together, mostly in the economy and science.

NOMADISM AND STUDIES IN NOMADISM

The nomadism in Paktun Nomadism

PART III

By KIANA KHAN

Afghanistan 1954-1960

My studies have led to the above result and am subject to various influences and situations. It has been proven that there are many different forms of nomadism and the Paktun Nomadism is one of the oldest and most famous. It is believed to have existed for thousands of years.

There are many Paktun tribes in the region and each tribe has its own culture and language. It is important to note that the Paktun Nomadism is not limited to a single tribe, but rather encompasses a wide range of tribes that all share certain characteristics.

Although the Paktun Nomadism is not limited to a single tribe, it is important to note that the
