Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 27 - The United States will today call upon the Security Council to discuss the question of apartheid in South Africa.

The resolution to be considered by the Security Council today represents a change in the United States' position on the subject. It was prepared in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. to discuss the question, which is believed to be one of the most important matters on its calendar.

President Johnson described apartheid as "an affront to human dignity" and "a commission of the sin of racism".

President Johnson's statement comes two days after South Africa's President J. F. Pi den delivered a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in which he said that the United States "will not spend its money" to support or aid any government in the world that it believes is economically or politically unable to support itself.

The United States' resolution on apartheid was drawn up in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid. It is believed that the resolution will be adopted by the Security Council today.

The resolution is a strong reaffirmation of the United States' position on the subject and is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members.

The resolution will call upon the Security Council to adopt a policy of economic sanctions against South Africa and to impose a complete boycott of the country.

The resolution also calls for the immediate withdrawal of all troops from the country.

The United States' resolution on apartheid is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members, including all of the permanent members of the council.

Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 27 - The United States will today call upon the Security Council to discuss the question of apartheid in South Africa.

The resolution to be considered by the Security Council today represents a change in the United States' position on the subject. It was prepared in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. to discuss the question, which is believed to be one of the most important matters on its calendar.

President Johnson described apartheid as "an affront to human dignity" and "a commission of the sin of racism".

President Johnson's statement comes two days after South Africa's President J. F. Pi den delivered a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in which he said that the United States "will not spend its money" to support or aid any government in the world that it believes is economically or politically unable to support itself.

The United States' resolution on apartheid was drawn up in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid. It is believed that the resolution will be adopted by the Security Council today.

The resolution is a strong reaffirmation of the United States' position on the subject and is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members.

The resolution will call upon the Security Council to adopt a policy of economic sanctions against South Africa and to impose a complete boycott of the country.

The resolution also calls for the immediate withdrawal of all troops from the country.

The United States' resolution on apartheid is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members, including all of the permanent members of the council.

Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 27 - The United States will today call upon the Security Council to discuss the question of apartheid in South Africa.

The resolution to be considered by the Security Council today represents a change in the United States' position on the subject. It was prepared in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. to discuss the question, which is believed to be one of the most important matters on its calendar.

President Johnson described apartheid as "an affront to human dignity" and "a commission of the sin of racism".

President Johnson's statement comes two days after South Africa's President J. F. Pi den delivered a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in which he said that the United States "will not spend its money" to support or aid any government in the world that it believes is economically or politically unable to support itself.

The United States' resolution on apartheid was drawn up in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid. It is believed that the resolution will be adopted by the Security Council today.

The resolution is a strong reaffirmation of the United States' position on the subject and is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members.

The resolution will call upon the Security Council to adopt a policy of economic sanctions against South Africa and to impose a complete boycott of the country.

The resolution also calls for the immediate withdrawal of all troops from the country.

The United States' resolution on apartheid is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members, including all of the permanent members of the council.

Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 27 - The United States will today call upon the Security Council to discuss the question of apartheid in South Africa.

The resolution to be considered by the Security Council today represents a change in the United States' position on the subject. It was prepared in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. to discuss the question, which is believed to be one of the most important matters on its calendar.

President Johnson described apartheid as "an affront to human dignity" and "a commission of the sin of racism".

President Johnson's statement comes two days after South Africa's President J. F. Pi den delivered a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in which he said that the United States "will not spend its money" to support or aid any government in the world that it believes is economically or politically unable to support itself.

The United States' resolution on apartheid was drawn up in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid. It is believed that the resolution will be adopted by the Security Council today.

The resolution is a strong reaffirmation of the United States' position on the subject and is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members.

The resolution will call upon the Security Council to adopt a policy of economic sanctions against South Africa and to impose a complete boycott of the country.

The resolution also calls for the immediate withdrawal of all troops from the country.

The United States' resolution on apartheid is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members, including all of the permanent members of the council.

Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 27 - The United States will today call upon the Security Council to discuss the question of apartheid in South Africa.

The resolution to be considered by the Security Council today represents a change in the United States' position on the subject. It was prepared in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid.

The Security Council is scheduled to meet at 10 a.m. to discuss the question, which is believed to be one of the most important matters on its calendar.

President Johnson described apartheid as "an affront to human dignity" and "a commission of the sin of racism".

President Johnson's statement comes two days after South Africa's President J. F. Pi den delivered a speech to the United Nations General Assembly in which he said that the United States "will not spend its money" to support or aid any government in the world that it believes is economically or politically unable to support itself.

The United States' resolution on apartheid was drawn up in consultation with 12 other countries which have consistently opposed apartheid. It is believed that the resolution will be adopted by the Security Council today.

The resolution is a strong reaffirmation of the United States' position on the subject and is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members.

The resolution will call upon the Security Council to adopt a policy of economic sanctions against South Africa and to impose a complete boycott of the country.

The resolution also calls for the immediate withdrawal of all troops from the country.

The United States' resolution on apartheid is expected to be supported by the majority of the Security Council members, including all of the permanent members of the council.
CONNALLY DISCRIBES SHOOTING OF KENNEDY: \nSTATE OF JOHNNIE P. KENNEDY: MUST STUN NATION TO FEAR OF EXTREMISM

TEXAS Gov. John Connally described the slaying of President Kennedy as a 'shameful and senseless act' and said the nation would have to 'reach out to the world and explain why we had to do this'.

"This is the only answer I have," Connally said. "I can't explain why. He was our President. He was our leader. He was our nation's hope. He was our nation's pride. He was our nation's future. He was our nation's best."

The President was shot in the throat and was killed at 12:30 a.m. in the American Cine-Century Theatre in the Texas Theatre in Dallas, Texas, November 22.

The President's death was announced by Dr. David J. Mckee, the White House physician, on November 22.

The President was shot in the throat and was killed at 12:30 a.m. in the American Cine-Century Theatre in the Texas Theatre in Dallas, Texas, November 22.

The President was shot in the throat and was killed at 12:30 a.m. in the American Cine-Century Theatre in the Texas Theatre in Dallas, Texas, November 22.