TRUCE SUPERVISION IN CYPRUS STARTS TODAY.

TURKISH PLACES FLY IN CYPRUS;
SHOTS FIRED ON KUTCHUK HOUSE.

Cypriot leaders of the United Nations were prepared this morning to receive the first contingent of UN observers to the island, which will begin its task of supervising the establishment of a truce in the area. The mission is composed of seven Danish officers, who have been selected by the UN Commission of Observation and Supervision, and are armed with .30 caliber rifles. The mission is led by Major Holger Pedersen, a Danish colonel who served in the UN peace forces in Korea and the United States. The observers will be housed in the United Nations House in Nicosia, which has been provided with temporary accommodations by the Cypriot government.

A REVIEW OF MAJOR WORLD EVENTS IN 1963 AND PROSPECTS FOR 1964

By: Anis Hashi

Follow-up to the statement by the Joint Assembly on the United Nations Development Program for 1963-64, and other relevant documents, Mr. Chairman, I believe there is a need for the recipient countries to be more conscious of the viewpoint of the recipient countries. The United Nations has always tended to give aid to the recipient countries, but still there is a need for recipient countries to be more conscious of the recipient country’s viewpoint.

In the light of my experience in Ethiopia and other countries, I believe that the recipient countries must be more conscious of the recipient country’s viewpoint.

An assessment of Peace Corp work

The U.S. Peace Corps has completed its first year of operation in Afghanistan, where its goal is to help people to help themselves. The Corps was established by President Kennedy in 1961, and its first group of Peace Corps volunteers arrived in Afghanistan in 1962.

The Peace Corps volunteers are working in a wide range of fields, including education, health, agriculture, and development. They are helping to build schools, clinics, and roads, and are also working with local officials to improve the lives of Afghans.

The Peace Corps volunteers are not just helping to build physical structures, they are also helping to build the skills of Afghans. They are teaching Afghans how to read and write, how to use modern farming techniques, and how to make use of their natural resources.

The Peace Corps volunteers are also working to improve the health of Afghans. They are teaching Afghans how to prevent and treat diseases, and are also helping to build hospitals and clinics.

The Peace Corps volunteers are also helping to build the Afghan economy. They are working with Afghan farmers to improve their crops, and are also helping to build industries.

The Peace Corps volunteers are working to build a better future for Afghanistan. They are helping to build the skills of Afghans, and are also helping to build the economy of Afghanistan. They are helping to build a brighter future for Afghanistan.
