U.N. Term in Congo Is Over; U. Thant Warns Against Present Crisis in Republic

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y., July 1, (Reuters)—

U. Thant, U.N. Secretary-General, warned the Congo Tuesday that failure to overcome its domestic problems would bring about a violent reaction.

In a report to the Security Council, the last major group to be drawn from the Congo, he also assured the Congo-government that it would continue to have "for the time being" the status of all U.N. technical assistance operations to help solve its economic problems.

U. Thant said there was "much concern" about the situation in the southern part of Katanga, the former province of Democratic Republic of the Congo. He said it was being "tipped" as a possible place of major unrest in the province.

There was "some fear that the economic situation, which might be made worse in Katangan domestic problems would bring about a violent reaction."

In a report to the Security Council, the head of the U.N. forces said it was "impossible to estimate" the situation.

six months, but the president of the republic had not been given the opportunity to enter into talks with the central government.

Whatever its shortcomings, the U.N. operations had "proved and extended the authority of the U.N. to meet grave emergencies, and to do so with a minimum of violence," the secretary-general said. In 1960 the Congo appealed for help in the conflict of the western and eastern regions following the president's bid for independence from Belgium.

U. Thant took formal note of the return from voluntary exile of Mr. Tshombe and of M. Albert Kahaq, former Premier of South Kivu, and asked the government to consider the possibility of granting him a "free and frank" dialogue with the president of the government.

Eisenhower, Lodge

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and former Secretary of State John Foster Dulles met in Geneva in 1953

UNICEF Will Help RVD Training Centre

KABUL, July 1—UNICEF will help the RVD Training Centre of the National Training Centre of the Royal Danish

Institute at Kabul.

M. Shamsuddin, the Deputy Chief of the Department stated yesterday that the training centre would be of great benefit to the country. The centre, he said, would carry out the tasks of installing the generator and work on the project, he said, would begin soon.

UNICEF is an international organization that aims to provide support for education and health initiatives, particularly for children in developing countries. The mention of UNICEF in this text suggests that the organization may have contributed to the training centre, which could be a facility meant to enhance the nation's capacity to train personnel, possibly for military or civilian roles.
Afghanistan and Peaceful Use of Nuclear Power

The President of the Afghan Atomic Energy Commission has called for a world-wide campaign which would make nuclear science available to all. "For one thing, we know that atomic energy can be used in the benefit of mankind." He said. "This fact that we have decided to establish a body to control the development of atomic energy is not insignificant. I mean that Afghanistan has all the international agreements which are necessary for the peaceful use of atomic energy." The Atmea President warned that the presence of nuclear installations in our country will be opposing -action against the United Nations.

At the same time it should be mentioned that the Afghan people, after a long period of peace and war, have always opposed any measure which would bring about destruction and depopulation. At the present time, the Afghan people are enjoying good health and are determined to continue their peaceful development. Therefore, the Afghan people will never suffer from any measure which would bring about destruction and depopulation. PRESS Review

"What's New" is a glance at the news of the world from Associated Press.

The United States has announced that it will withdraw its forces from South Africa. The decision was taken in response to the South African government's continued support for the apartheid regime. The withdrawal of US forces is expected to have a significant impact on the region and will likely lead to increased tensions with other countries in the area.
