LIQUIDITY AND GOLD STANDARD

BY R. HARDING

The report period of 1962 was from the middle of the month of July to the end of December 1962. During this period, the focus was on the international gold market, the role of the gold standard, and the implications of the Bretton Woods system for the stability of the international economy.

The report states that the international gold market was in a state of flux, with gold prices fluctuating widely and the gold standard coming under increasing pressure.

The report argues that the international gold market was not a true market, but rather a series of bilateral transactions that were subject to political and economic pressures.

The report also notes the importance of the gold standard for the stability of the international economy, and argues that the abandonment of the gold standard would have serious consequences for the global economy.

In conclusion, the report argues that the international gold market was not a true market, and that the gold standard was essential for the stability of the international economy.
Thousands Join First Day Of March For Voting Rights

SELMA, Alabama, March 22, (AP).—At least 10,000 civil rights demonstrators joined the marchers on the first leg of a 54-mile, non-violent protest march by Alabama Negroes from Brown Chapel AME Church to the Alabama capital area. The marchers were massed at a church where the Bureau of Investigation (FB) agents were stationed. The marchers are expected to arrive in Montgomery on March 24 in hopes of enacting a voting rights law to be signed by President Lyndon B. Johnson.
