WEST GERMANY PLANS RAILWAY REFORM

The West German cabinet this week took steps to modernize the country's railway system. The government decided to allocate the necessary funds for the construction of new lines and the upgrading of existing ones. The plan is to reduce the number of passenger cars and increase the number of freight cars. The new lines will be built primarily in the areas with the highest traffic density. The government also plans to reduce the number of trains running on some routes and to increase the frequency of others.
