U.S. Views UN Council's Role In Vietnam

VIETNAM. May 6

President Johnson's views of the role of the United Nations Security Council in Vietnam are illustrated in a new report of the United Nations Security Council's role in Vietnam. The report is the first time the United Nations Security Council has reported its findings on Vietnam since the Council was established.

The report, which was released by the United Nations Security Council, states that the Council had been determined to make its findings known to the world and its findings are based on a broad range of information gathered by the Council.

The Council has been investigating the situation in Vietnam for several months and its findings are based on the observations of experts from various countries and organizations.

The report states that the Council has concluded that the United Nations Security Council had been unable to make its findings known because of the lack of cooperation from some countries and organizations.

The report also states that the United Nations Security Council had been unable to make its findings known because of the lack of cooperation from some countries and organizations.
