At Least Two Dead As Oil Rig Collapses In North Sea

A GIANT oil rig collapsed and sank in the North Sea on Monday, killing two as it sank ashore. Seven others were rescued safely and one was missing.

The blast was set off by the British government in response to demands for a moratorium on new North Sea oil development. The collapse occurred in the North Sea basin, half a mile off the coast of Scotland. A spokesman for the government said the blast had been set off at 5:30 a.m. Monday by a device planted at the site.

The rig, which is owned by the British government, was being used to drill for oil in the North Sea. The government had been accused of drilling for oil in a manner that was unsafe.

The collapse of the rig could have serious implications for the future of North Sea oil production. The government had been planning to continue drilling for oil in the area, but the collapse could lead to a moratorium on new drilling.

The government has said that it will conduct an investigation into the collapse of the rig. The investigation will be conducted by a team of experts from the government's Department of Energy.

U.S. Christmas Traffic Accident Toll Reaches 97,000

The Christmas holiday season is one of the busiest times of the year for traffic accidents. According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, over 97,000 people were killed in traffic accidents in the United States during the Christmas holiday season last year.

The holiday season is a time when many people travel to visit family and friends. This increased travel can lead to an increase in traffic accidents. The National Highway Traffic Safety Administration recommends that drivers take extra precautions during the holiday season to prevent accidents.
