Morro Refuses To Accept Fonfani's Resignation

ROME, Dec. 26 (Reuters).—Prof. Amintore Fanfani resigned today as Italian Premier in a storm of embarrassing controversy.

But last night Aldo Moro, the Italian Socialist Premier who is supposed to wither his resignation, said he had been "jailed" by his party. Fanfani said his resignation was "highly appreciated." Fonfani, who has been under suspicion of being a right-wing politician because of his moves towards the Fascist party, was also re-elected as Chairman of the United National Left.

But the direct reason for the resignation was a clash between a traditional Italian political party and a government coalitiion faction—expertly decided "revelation" policy in an uncertain right-wing magazine.

The magazine, 2 Borgoretti, Monday published a long attack on the Italian Foreign Miniser's friends, Prof. Giovanni Sutti, and his trip which was for the "good of his country." Fanfani and his friends have not commented, but the Italian press suggested a new "campaign" on the outside.

To Construct 30 Gas Stations

KABUL, Dec. 26.—The government Monopoly Plans to build more gas stations and gas reserves in the capital and the provinces. As part of the programme is to open 31 gas stations throughout the country. The new project will include 25 new gas stations in the capital and the provinces.

More than half of the stations will be built in the capital, and the others will be built in the provinces. The Monopoly Government was considering the construction of the gas stations.

Fossil fuel prices are known to have died and there is virtually no limit for the gas stations.

The government has been planning to introduce gas stations in the countryside, but the plans have been delayed until the present government was formed.

The 3,000 ton gas, according to the Russian experts, is sufficient to meet the needs of the gas stations. The gas was delivered earlier this year in its original form.

Indian Ambassador Meets Viceroy

Premier Stresses Importance Of Neutrality, Sincerity In Carrying Out Judicial Duties

PRIME Minister Mohammad Hassam Malviandal told the judges of the commission and heads of provincial courts that, on the basis of the government's policy, the Ministry of Justice had been instructed to take measures to protect people's time unnecessarily in the administration of justice.

Efforts should be made to make the courts functional as people's legal advisors, in the absence of other advisors. The authority of the primary courts should also be strengthened, he claimed.

Heads of courts have been instructed in Kabul to exchange views with the Ministries of Justice. During their three-day stay the will attend conferences.

Accompanying the Premier and some of the officials of the Ministry of Justice, the Judges met the Prime Minister at the Gulshane building of the Prime Ministry on Tuesday.

Addressing the judges, the Prime Minister said, "It is necessary to take into account the difficulties involved. The courts should give their verdict with the least possible delay."

Malviandal said he has instructed the justices to make a record of cases so that judges could make out the people's points. Until the establishment of the courts, people should consider it their duty to give legal advice to the people.

The Prime Minister said since the establishment of the courts it is difficult for people to travel from place to place to get to justice. Hence, efforts should be made that people are made aware of the jurisdiction of primary courts so that people do not have to travel long distances.

Malviandal added that one of the important tasks of the government is to establish a system of independent judiciary in the country.

He further said that the government was working towards this aim.

Viet Cong Cong Announce Four-Day Ceasefire

SADSON, Dec. 26 (AP).—The Viet Cong have announced a four-day truce in war-torn South Vietnam.

They said they would observe a four-day "Truce of the Poor" during which the Viet Cong forces would cease hostilities. The announcement was made late Tuesday without a singlebelumt.

The announcement came as a surprise to the American military and to the South Vietnamese government.

The Viet Cong earlier announced a four-day truce in the Central Highlands for a 12-hour period beginning Thursday.

A 30-hour truce over Christmas

Actually, fighting apparently halted for only a few hours during either of these periods. U.S. military sources in Saigon said the Viet Cong firing continued.

There was also fighting over Christmas weekend, some 30-hour truce over Christmas.

Bundy said Thursday the administration's "inaction" would make it necessary for the Viet Cong to move more toward the peace table to get "real" peace at the "real" table.

The cease-fire movement in Hanoi has made "very great effort" and a "very positive" step, according to his office official. He said the Viet Cong knew that the United States would not accept his proposals. He said that it was "going to be followed by some sort of action that will give them a little more leverage." He added that the Vietnamese government "will continue the fight".

"Until and until we do, Bundy said, "We don't have to see how this matter can be the subject of discussion with the United States."
