Individuals, Companies, Nations Spend For Prestige

KABUL TIMES

March 16, 1986

The military budget, which provides for the defense of the nation, is a major spending item. The government of Afghanistan, like other governments around the world, devotes a significant portion of its budget to military expenditure. This expenditure is not only for the purchase of weapons and equipment, but also for the salaries of military personnel, training, and other related activities.

The military budget is an important indicator of a country's commitment to national security and defense. It reflects the government's priorities and its assessment of potential threats to its territory.

The tours include visits to historical sites, such as the ancient city of Balkh, and natural wonders, such as the mountains of Badakhshan.

One of the most popular tours is the "Himalayan Adventure" tour, which takes visitors to the mountains of Badakhshan and the Pamir Mountains.
Individuals, Companies, Nations Spend For Prestige

The military buildup in all parts of the world is a reflection of a basic sentiment that war is a way to gain prestige, to enhance a nation's standing in the eyes of others. It is an effort to demonstrate force in order to gain strength. This is why nations spend for prestige. The United States, for example, spends more on defense than do any other nation in the world. It is a way to project power and influence.

The constant striving for prestige is not limited to nations. Companies also spend vast sums of money in order to gain prestige. It is a way to demonstrate their power and influence, to enhance their standing in the eyes of others. This is why companies spend for prestige. The Ford Motor Company, for example, spends more on advertising than do any other company in the world. It is a way to project power and influence.

The constant striving for prestige is not limited to nations and companies. Individuals also spend vast sums of money in order to gain prestige. It is a way to demonstrate their power and influence, to enhance their standing in the eyes of others. This is why individuals spend for prestige. The movie star, for example, spends more on clothes and jewelry than do any other person in the world. It is a way to project power and influence.

The constant striving for prestige is not limited to the United States, the Ford Motor Company, and the movie star. It is a way of life for all of us. We all strive for prestige, for power and influence, in order to enhance our standing in the eyes of others. It is a way to demonstrate our power and influence, to enhance our standing in the eyes of others. This is why we all spend for prestige. The teacher, for example, spends more on books and educational materials than do any other person in the world. It is a way to project power and influence.

USSR Govt., People Condemn Verhoeven’s Apartheid Policy

NEW YORK, March 24, (AP) — The government and peoples of the Soviet Union condemn the policy of racial discrimination and apartheid, erected by the South African regime against the indigenous population of black and colored South Africans, and its attempts constituting a crime against humanity and a threat to peace and security.

The Soviet Union comes out for the most radical measures to put an end to the constant violation of the principle of the right of peoples to self-determination, the violation of the United Nations Charter and the Charter of the Economic and Social Council of the United Nations, which have been adopted in order to make it impossible for the racist government of South West Africa to convert this principle into reality by the employment of imperialist and colonialist methods, including the use of pressure and threats against the peoples of the United Nations and the state of South Africa.

The Soviet Union takes the position that the World Council of Peace has ended in experiments and dominating the United States (APR) — It was reported.
