The Impact of Afghan Culture

On Islamic Civilization

Before the advent of Islam, Afghanistan consisted of a number of small states, each of which had its own culture and language. The religion of Islam brought unity under one rule, and the language of the people became the same. However, the language of the people was not the same in all parts of the country. In the north, the language was Pashto, while in the south, it was Persian. The people of the north were predominantly Pashtuns, while those of the south were Persians.

The Afghan people have always been known for their hospitality and their love for literature. The Afghan literature is rich in poetry, and the Afghan poets have always been respected. The Afghan people have also been known for their warrior spirit. The Afghan people have always been ready to fight for their country and their religion.

Afghanistan is an independent nation and the freedom of Afghanistan was won by the people of Afghanistan. The people of Afghanistan have always been ready to fight for their freedom. The Afghan people have always been known for their courage and their determination.

Afghanistan is a country of great beauty. The land of Afghanistan is covered with mountains, forests, and rivers. The climate of Afghanistan is mild, and the people of Afghanistan are happy.
