ABANDONING NUCLEAR DETERRENT
U.S.A. May Continue Private Pressure on West

LONDON, April 3, (UPI) — A gap in the Soviet Union's nuclear deterrent has been noted by experts in the United States, according to British officials. This gap is said to be a result of the United States' decision to reduce its own nuclear deterrent, which has been a key factor in the current arms race.

AGFAN (AGFAN) — It was announced today that the United States had decided to maintain its nuclear deterrent at least until the end of the year. This decision was made in response to the apparent decrease in the Soviet Union's nuclear capability. The United States has been under pressure to reduce its own nuclear arsenal in order to reduce tensions with the Soviet Union. However, this latest decision suggests that the United States will continue to maintain its nuclear deterrent for the time being.
