Afridis And The Independence War

By OREGINAL

Two days ago a British official took an intelligence report on the Afridis to London. The Afridis, an independent Pashtun tribe in the North-West Frontier Province, are being closely watched by the British military. The report indicates that the Afridis are becoming more active in their efforts to maintain their independence.

The Afridis are a tribe of Pashtuns who live in the North-West Frontier Province of Pakistan. They are known for their fierce independence and their resistance to British control. The report suggests that the Afridis are planning to launch a series of attacks against British forces in the area.

The British government has been aware of the Afridis' activities for some time, and has been trying to maintain control over the area. The Afridis are known for their strong resistance to British rule, and have been a source of conflict between the British and the Pashtuns.

Kenya Africans Asked To Look Nkrumah For Help

Kabul News In Brief

Mr. Sven Kasten, byline, Assistant Secretary of the Council of Nationalities, said yesterday that the Kenya Africans were asked to look to Nkrumah for help.

U.N. on Apr. 30

NEW YORK, Apr. 30, 1967 (U.N.)—U-Thant, the acting U.N. Secretary-General, announced yesterday that the Nkrumah government had submitted a provisional draft of the new constitution to the United Nations. The draft was approved by the United African National Council (UANC) and endorsed by the Nkrumah government.

The draft includes provisions for the establishment of a government and a parliament, as well as a provision for the establishment of a new national assembly. The assembly will be responsible for the formulation of the new constitution and for the selection of a new president.

The draft also includes provisions for the establishment of a new national police force, as well as for the establishment of a new national army. The army will be responsible for the defense of the country and for the maintenance of law and order.

The draft also includes provisions for the establishment of a new national judiciary, as well as for the establishment of a new national court system. The court system will be responsible for the administration of justice and for the protection of human rights.

The draft also includes provisions for the establishment of a new national education system, as well as for the establishment of a new national system of higher education. The education system will be responsible for the provision of education and for the training of teachers.
