THE CAIRO CONFERENCE: A GLANCE

THE TEXT OF HAKIMI’S SPEECH

The following is an extract from the text of the speech delivered on July 16th by Mr. Hakimi, the Egyptian Premier, at the Cairo International Conference on the question of the Middle East. It was delivered in the presence of the King of Egypt and the Soviet Premier.

We have succeeded in creating a framework for peace in the Middle East. This framework is based on several principles:

1. The principle of coexistence and non-aggression.
2. The principle of mutual respect for each other’s national sovereignty and territorial integrity.
3. The principle of the right of all people to self-determination and national independence.
4. The principle of the right of all peoples to live in peace and security.
5. The principle of the right of all peoples to live in freedom and independence.

We believe that the future of the Middle East can only be assured if these principles are fully realized. The framework we have created is a stepping stone towards a lasting peace in the Middle East.

We hope that the international community will support this framework and work towards its realization. We are confident that the Middle East will be a land of peace and prosperity for all its people.

Mr. Hakimi concluded his speech by expressing the hope that the international community will support the framework we have created and work towards its realization. He emphasized the importance of unity and cooperation among the peoples of the Middle East for the achievement of a lasting peace.
