HALTING TESTS IN AIR, SPACE AND WATER

U.S.A. Calls For Early Treaty

NEW YORK, Oct. 28 (AP)—President Kennedy today asked the United States to lead the way in ending the arms race by calling for a halt to all tests of nuclear weapons in space, air and water. It was the result of a careful study by Army experts in an effort to end the arms race.

Dr. Arthur Danto, the U.S. representative on the Geneva conference, said that the United States now has a substantial lead in other ways—such as anti-ballistic missile systems, which could be used to defend against the threat of nuclear weapons. But the United States has not yet developed a defense system to protect against the threat of nuclear weapons.

Dr. Kennedy said that the United States would be willing to consider a scheme for international inspection of nuclear weapons in other ways. But he warned that this would not be easy to achieve.

The United States has already agreed to accept international inspection of its nuclear weapons. But the United States has not yet agreed to accept international inspection of its nuclear weapons in other ways.
