U.S. Mid-term Congressional Election Prospects

The U.S. mid-term congressional elections are set to take place on November 8, 1982. It is a crucial election year as it may set the stage for the upcoming presidential election in 1984. The Democratic Party is hoping to regain control of Congress, while the Republican Party is expected to maintain its majority. The outcome will depend on various factors, including voter turnout, the economy, and the political climate.

NOVEMBER 2, 1982

President Kennedy was named a "National Hero" by the government as a sign of appreciation for his service to the country. This is the third time that Kennedy has received this honor. In 1980, he was awarded the "Alaska National Hero" award, and in 1981, he received the "National Hero" award. In 1982, he was named "National Hero" by the government in recognition of his contributions to the country. This is the third time that Kennedy has received this honor.

The Republicans, who are traditionally associated with the hardline stance on China, have been much more cautious in their approach to China. They have been more willing to engage in dialogue with the Chinese government, and have been more supportive of the free market system. The Democrats, on the other hand, have been more critical of the U.S. relationship with China, and have been more supportive of the Chinese government.

The meeting between the two leaders was a significant event in the history of U.S.-Chinese relations. It marked the first time that a U.S. president had visited China as a guest of the Chinese government. The meeting was also significant in that it marked the first time that a U.S. president had met with a Chinese leader in the White House.
