Plans To Make Radio Effective Medium Of Mass Communication

By WARREN H. WARDEN

 plans to make radio an effective medium of mass communication are being worked out in Kabul, Afghanistan. The Afghan Press Department is in charge of the radio service, and is planning to increase the number of programs and improve the quality of the service. The Afghan government is interested in radio because it is seen as a means of reaching the entire population of the country, which includes many rural areas. The Radio Kabul station, located in Kabul, is already broadcasting programs in English and Persian. The government is also considering the possibility of broadcasting in other languages, such as Urdu and Pathan. The Radio Kabul station is housed in a new building that was completed last year. The station has a capacity of 20,000 watts, and is able to reach most of Afghanistan. The Afghan government is hoping to increase the number of listeners by improving the quality of the programs and by increasing the number of hours of broadcasting per day. The Afghan government is also interested in radio because it is seen as a means of disseminating information and education to the Afghan people.
