France And Japan To Negotiate Trade Treaty

PARI S, Nov. 10 (Reuters) - France and Japan have agreed to negotiate a treaty of mutual assistance, a Japanese official announced last night at the end of the official part of the Japanese Prime Minister, Mr. Hayato Ikeda’s, visit here.

The two Governments also have decided to sign an agreement on rice and to form a joint committee of economic experts from both Governments.

The Japanese Prime Minister, Mr. Ichiro Hatoyama, as the Japanese Prime Minister, Mr. Ikeda, and the French Prime Minister, Mr. Jean-Sacha Chammas, have signed an agreement for the exchange of information on rice production.

The agreement will provide for the establishment of a committee of experts from both Governments to study the production and consumption of rice in the two countries and to make recommendations to the Governments on measures to promote the exchange of information and to facilitate the exchange of rice.

U.S. COMPLAINT AGAINST FRANCE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 10 (AP) - The United States has withdrawn a complaint against France at the International Court of Justice.

The United States had taken the complaint against France to the court in May, charging that France had violated international law by failing to cooperate in the prosecution of former French President, Charles de Gaulle.

The complaint alleged that France had refused to cooperate in the prosecution of de Gaulle, who was charged with charges of treason and conspiracy.

The United States had withdrawn the complaint on the basis of a settlement reached with France.

CONCEPT OF ABSORPTIVE CAPACITY IN PLANNING

By Mr. Najib Wahedi

The subject which I want to discuss today is one of the most fundamental aspects of economic development and is of great importance to any aspiring nation. It is the concept of absorptive capacity, which is crucial for countries to achieve a higher rate of growth. Absorptive capacity refers to the ability of a country to absorb and assimilate new knowledge and technology. It is a measure of a country's capability to innovate and to adapt to new challenges.

The absorptive capacity of a country is influenced by several factors. These include the level of human capital, the quality of institutions, the availability of capital, and the technological environment. A country with high absorptive capacity is able to benefit from foreign investments and knowledge transfer. This is achieved through the establishment of conducive policies, the creation of a conducive environment, and the provision of the necessary infrastructure.

The process of absorbing knowledge and technology is not automatic. It requires a combination of policies, strategies, and actions. Countries need to have a strategic vision for their development, and they need to have the political will to implement these strategies. Additionally, countries need to have the capacity to adapt to new challenges, to learn from their mistakes, and to continuously improve their policies and strategies.

In conclusion, the concept of absorptive capacity is a crucial aspect of economic development. It is not only about absorbing knowledge and technology, but it is also about how a country uses this knowledge to improve its productivity and to create a better living standard for its citizens.

THE PRESS AND RADIO AT A GLANCE

The daily habit of a press officer can be very challenging. The daily routine involves coordinating with the various media outlets to ensure that the latest news and updates are communicated effectively. It requires a lot of time management and strategic planning.

The key tasks of a press officer include organizing press conferences, managing media relations, and responding to media inquiries. It is important to maintain a good relationship with the media, as it can help to enhance the image of the organization.

One of the main challenges for a press officer is to balance the need for transparency and the need for confidentiality. It is important to ensure that the organization's sensitive information is not disclosed to the media.

In conclusion, being a press officer is a demanding job, but it is also very fulfilling. It requires a lot of dedication, hard work, and strategic thinking. A press officer must be able to effectively communicate with the media and to manage the organization's reputation.

OUR FARM LIFE

FARMERS in the rural areas are facing many challenges, such as the lack of adequate infrastructure and the shortage of resources. However, there are several initiatives being implemented to address these issues.

One such initiative is the provision of training to farmers. The government is working with local experts to provide farmers with training on various aspects of farming, such as crop management and pest control.

Another initiative is the provision of credit facilities to farmers. The government is working with banks to provide farmers with low-interest loans for purchasing seeds and equipment.

In conclusion, there are several initiatives being implemented to support farmers in the rural areas. These initiatives are expected to improve the living standards of farmers and to ensure a stable food supply.
