THE CONSTITUTIONAL CRISIS IN FRANCE

PART II

President de Gaulle enunciates his plans in the defense and strengthening of French national interests. He proposes an education and a cultural policy for the country. He demands that the President be elected by popular vote and by a joint council of the Senate and the Chamber of Deputies. He proposes a referendum on the issue of plebiscite rights. He demands that the government be in the hands of political personalities and not of military officers. He proposes the abolition of the power of the Ministry of the Interior. He proposes the creation of a National Defense Council. He proposes the establishment of a new state of emergency. He proposes the establishment of a new constitutional court.

The proposal of the President to the National Assembly for the adoption of the new Constitution is a political crisis. The President has announced that he will not resign if the National Assembly fails to adopt the new Constitution. He has announced that he will resign if the National Assembly does not adopt the new Constitution. He has announced that he will resign if the National Assembly does not adopt the new Constitution.
