WORLD TRADE TALKS IN EARLY 1964

U.N. Assembly Votes Resolution

TOKYO, Dec. 8 (AP)—The U.S. is reported to have offered to attend an international conference on trade problems between Communist China and free world nations. The offer was made at a meeting of the Asian-Pacific Finance Ministers here.

NEW YORK, Dec. 8 (AP)—The U.N. General Assembly yesterday approved a resolution calling for intensified international efforts to establish free trade with China.

The vote was 98-12, with 27 abstentions. India and Pakistan were among the nations voting against the resolution. The abstainers included 15 African and European nations and 11 others.

The resolution, which was sponsored by the U.S., provided for intensified international efforts to establish free trade with China. The U.S. is reported to have offered to attend an international conference on trade problems between Communist China and free world nations.

U.N. Debate On Outer Space

The report of the American News Foundation conference, entitled "The Outer Space Challenge," was considered by the U.N. General Assembly yesterday. The report, which is the result of a conference held in New York City, was presented by the American News Foundation.

The report emphasized the need for international cooperation in the exploration of outer space. It called for the establishment of a world organization to coordinate and regulate space activities.

The report also recommended the establishment of a fund to support scientific research and development in space. The fund would be financed by contributions from member nations of the U.N.

The report was widely praised by representatives of the assembly. Some nations, however, expressed reservations about the proposal for an international organization.
