New U.S. Thinking On Nuclear Policy For NATO

THE LANGUAGE PRESS

AT A GLANCE

Mr. George Ball, the United States Senator from New York and a strong proponent of détente, said today that new thinking was needed on nuclear policy for NATO. He was speaking at a conference of the European Parliamentarians for Peace on NATO's nuclear forces.

Ball said that the current approach to nuclear policy was based on the assumption that the United States would have to fight the Cold War alone.

"We need to think about a different strategy," he said. "One that places more emphasis on diplomacy and less on military force." He added that the United States should work towards reducing the number of nuclear weapons and developing alternative means of defence.

Ball's remarks were met with support from other delegates at the conference.

"We are not about to let the oil crisis ruin our chances for progress in other areas," he added.
