Double Purpose Of Geneva Science Conference

THE PRESS AND KABUL PROGRAMME

At a Glance

February 12, 1963

The second general session was devoted to a variety of questions concerning plant nutrition, and the organizers of the International Union of Biologists (IUB) held an official session. The session was opened by a presentation of the general theme of the conference, and was followed by several papers. One of the major discussions was on the role of nitrogen in plant growth and development. The importance of nitrogen for plant biology was emphasized, and the need for further research in this area was highlighted. Another paper dealt with the use of microorganisms in plant nutrition. The role of microorganisms in the fixation and utilization of nitrogen was discussed, and the potential for using these microorganisms in agriculture was explored. The session also featured discussions on the role of phosphorus and potassium in plant nutrition, and the importance of understanding the interactions between these nutrients and water. The session concluded with a summary of the day's talks and a discussion of future directions for research in plant nutrition. Several speakers pointed out the importance of interdisciplinary approaches in the study of plant nutrition, and the need for continued collaboration among researchers in different fields.

Problems and Characteristics of Afghanistan's Internal Development

AFGHANISTAN'S INTERNAL DEVELOPMENT

The following are the main points discussed during the first session on the theme of "Problems and Characteristics of Afghanistan's Internal Development." Several experts, including Dr. William Suter, Head of the Department of Economics at Kabul University, presented their views on the subject. Dr. Suter emphasized the need for a comprehensive approach to internal development, which should be based on a thorough understanding of the country's unique characteristics and problems. He noted that Afghanistan's internal development is characterized by several key factors that need to be considered.

Election Prospects In Britain

The British Labour Party's chance to become the major party in the next General Election which may be called at any time before November 1964 has greatly increased, according to a new survey. The survey, conducted by the Independent Survey Organization for the Labour Party, found that a Labour victory is now within reach of the party in the next General Election. The survey, which interviewed 1,200 voters, found that the Labour Party would win 360 seats, compared to 300 seats for the Conservative Party and 100 seats for the Liberal Party. The survey also found that the Labour Party would win the most votes, with 30% of the vote, followed by the Conservative Party with 25% and the Liberal Party with 15%.

Rosy Future For Young Africans & Soviets In Un Office

A young African or Soviet with the proper qualifications can find a place in the United Nations, according to a new report. The report, titled "Young Africans and Soviets in the United Nations," was published by the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP) and the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs (OCHA). The report notes that the United Nations provides opportunities for young people from Africa and the Soviet Union to work in its various agencies and offices. The report also highlights the achievements of some young African and Soviet professionals working in the United Nations, such as Dr. John Doe, a young African who works in the United Nations Development Programme, and Mr. Ivanov, a young Soviet who works in the United Nations Office for the Coordination of Humanitarian Affairs. The report concludes that the United Nations offers a unique opportunity for young people from Africa and the Soviet Union to contribute to global development and to make a difference in the world.
