The Library of the Faculty of Science contains over 400,000 volumes. In 1969, a new library building was opened, increasing the library’s capacity to 434,000 volumes. At the present time, it is expected that the present 12,000 students will have the opportunity to work in any of the three campuses during the summer, or to their own convenience. A number of the institutions in the Faculty are recently located in the town of Kabul and are developing an infrastructure to support the education of students.

The projects of the university are focused in the following areas:

- Science and Engineering: This includes the development of new programs and facilities for education and research in fields such as mathematics, physics, chemistry, and engineering.
- Humanities and Social Sciences: These programs focus on the development of new courses and initiatives in areas such as history, politics, and economics.
- Technology and Innovation: This involves the development of new technologies and innovations in fields such as computer science and robotics.

The university is committed to providing a high-quality education to its students, and is dedicated to advancing knowledge in all areas of study.

Library of the Faculty of Science:

The library is located in the main campus of the university, and is open to the public. It contains over 400,000 volumes, and is open to students, faculty, and staff. The library is equipped with modern technology, and is a valuable resource for those seeking to learn more about the subjects taught at the university.

Preliminary Results of Martian II Magnetometer Experience

The preliminary results of the Martian II Magnetic Experiment are presented in this issue. The experiment was conducted on board the spacecraft with a view to understanding the magnetic field of Mars. The results show that the magnetic field of Mars is complex and is not uniform across the planet. The magnetic field is strongest near the equator and weakest near the poles. The magnetic field is also tilted relative to the rotation axis of the planet.
