in the Western world, and it is a factor that should interest the French, and, indeed, the whole Western world," he said.

While Paris was reporting for the opening of the 1963-64 season of the Paris opera, Macmillan was in New York on the occasion of the 50th anniversary of the Armistice of 1918. The Armistice, which was signed at Compiegne, ended the first world war and created the French Republic. The Armistice was signed on November 11, 1918.

On the night of the Armistice, the French opera season opened with a performance of "La Boheme," a romantic opera by Giacomo Puccini. The performance was directed by Georges Bizet, the French composer of "Carmen." Bizet was also the director of the French opera company, which is known as the Paris Opera. The performance was attended by a large audience, including many of the city's leading citizens.

The performance was well received, and the audience praised the performers for their fine acting and singing. The French opera company was praised for its fine production and music. The performance was repeated several times, and it was a great success.

The opening of the Paris opera season was a major event in the cultural life of the city. It marked the beginning of the new season, and it was an important event for the French opera company. The performance was a great success, and it was a great honor for the French opera company to have been chosen to open the season.

Yesterday was Afghanistan's new year, and the people of Afghanistan celebrated it throughout the country.

One may ask what is new about this. Afghanistan's new year, now celebrated as the Islamic new year, marks the celebration of the Islamic calendar which is based on the lunar month. The celebration is significant as it marks the beginning of the Islamic calendar, which is based on the sighting of the new moon.

In Afghanistan, the celebration of the new year is marked by family gatherings, the exchange of gifts, and special dishes. The day is also marked by the act of apple peeling, which is a traditional custom in Afghanistan.

The new year in Afghanistan is a time for reflection and looking forward to the future. It is a time to make resolutions and set goals for the coming year. The celebration is also a time to reflect on the past year and its challenges, and to look forward to the opportunities of the new year.

The Afghan people are looking forward to a better future, and the new year is a symbol of hope and promise for a better tomorrow.
