National-Liberation Movement in Asia
And Africa Ends Colonialism

Under the impact of the national-liberation movement, the colonial system of imperialism, one of the most oppressive systems in modern history, is crumbling. Africa and Asia are the most populous areas of the world, with over 1 billion of the world's population living there. The exploits of the imperialists have met with greater resistance than ever before. In some areas, the independent trend has already emerged.

In Africa, the people are demanding national liberation and independence. The struggle is not just a fight against foreign domination, but also a struggle for social justice and equality. The national-liberation movement has been gaining momentum, driven by the masses' desire for freedom and self-determination.

In Asia, the struggle for national liberation has also been intense. The people are demanding the end of colonialism and the establishment of independent states. The national-liberation movement has been a powerful force in challenging the colonial order and demanding a new world order.

The national-liberation movement in Asia and Africa is a manifestation of the peoples' desire for freedom, equality, and justice. It is a challenge to the existing world order and a call for a more just and equitable world.

The language of the press at a glance

Yesterday's blank in a note from the United States to the UN did not mean that the United States was cool to criticism in the improvement of the human rights situation in Pakistan. The United States, on the contrary, has expressed its concerns and has put forward its own proposals. The US stance is based on the principle that human rights should be respected and protected at all times.

The writer's stand on the need for human rights is not new. Both in the United States and some other countries, human rights have been a consistent and important issue.

The writer believes that the United States should continue to support the national-liberation movement in Asia and Africa and promote human rights. It is important to work towards a world where all peoples have the right to self-determination and freedom.

U.S. ATOMIC SUBMARINE THREATERS APPEARS TO BE LOST

The U.S. atomic submarine threaters that were expected to be deployed in the Pacific are now said to be in the Arctic. The Soviet Union has recently announced its intention to deploy submarine-based missiles in the Arctic. This move is likely to increase the tension in the region.

A U.S. Navy official has confirmed that the submarines are planning to use the Arctic as a route for their patrols. The submarines will be equipped with nuclear missiles and will be able to strike targets in Europe and Asia. The move is seen as a response to the increasing military capabilities of the Soviet Union.

In light of this development, it is crucial that the international community work towards a nuclear disarmament treaty to prevent a arms race in the Arctic. The Arctic Council, which is comprised of the eight Arctic states, should take a lead in this effort.

Air Services

The US-Australia Booking Office in Arnhem has announced a new service to Darwin. This is the first direct service between the two cities and will greatly benefit the people of the Northern Territory.

The service is scheduled to operate four times a week and will take around 2 hours. The flights will be operated by the Qantas Airways and will use modern aircraft.

This new service will provide a much-needed boost to the local economy and will help to connect the Northern Territory to the rest of Australia. It is expected to bring about a significant increase in tourism and trade.

Significant Advances In Fighting Cancer

A Portuguese scientist has made a significant breakthrough in cancer research. He has discovered a new method for destroying cancer cells without harming healthy cells.

The method involves the use of a special type of radiation that is only effective on cancer cells. The radiation is absorbed by the cancer cells and destroys them, leaving healthy cells unharmed.

This is a major advance in cancer treatment as it offers a more effective and less toxic alternative to current treatments such as chemotherapy and radiation therapy.

Two and Half Million Acres of Forests in Afghanistan

Natural forests in Afghanistan cover an area of about 2.5 million acres. Most of these forests are in Afghanistan itself, but a significant portion is also in Tajikistan.

These forests provide an important source of timber and are also a key source of fresh water for the region. They also provide habitat for numerous species of wildlife.

Efforts are underway to protect these forests and ensure their sustainability. This includes the establishment of protected areas and the implementation of forest management practices.

KABUL TIMES

President Lyndon B. Johnson of the United States yesterday urged the Soviet Union to fulfill its Geneva Agreement on Laos to avoid a "total disaster" in south east Asia.

In a message to the UN General Assembly, Mr. Johnson said that the United States was "deeply disappointed" by the failure of the Geneva Accords to end the Laotian war and by the "deliberate attempt" by the North Vietnamese to "violate the spirit and substance" of the agreements.

Mr. Johnson said that the United States had "little choice" but to continue "reasonable" military aid to South Vietnam "while the Geneva Accords are being ignored." He added that the United States had "no interest" in a "forced and premature" settlement of the conflict in Laos.
