USSR REJECTS US CALL TO BAN FISSILABLE MATERIAL PRODUCTION

US Reserves, Charge Soviets

GENEVA, June 6, (AP) — Moscow and Washington exchanged charges in a press conference where the delegates juxtaposed Cold War rhetoric to the latest nuclear developments in the world peace.

After Canadian, Russian, and British delegations had suggested that the United States and the Soviet Union sign a comprehensive test-ban treaty to end the world's arms race, the US called on the UN Security Council to take action on the proposal.

At the same time, the Russian delegation announced that it had already rejected the US proposal, saying that the US was not prepared to accept the principle that all nuclear powers would be required to sign a test-ban treaty.

In an interview with the Associated Press, Dr. Jagan and his colleagues had refused to comment on the latest nuclear developments in the world peace.

"We have been able to find a solution to this problem," said Dr. Jagan. "It is not a question of whether we should sign a test-ban treaty. It is a question of what steps we should take to end the arms race, and we believe that the steps we have taken are the right ones."
