A Border Of Friendship

The Afghan-Chinese border is being used as a means of peaceful coexistence and mutual benefit. Both countries share a long history of trade and cultural exchange, and this border offers a unique opportunity for further cooperation.

Both sides have confirmed to various spokesmen before and after the signing of the accord that the border is one of friendship, and that the Chinese and Afghan Governments will move toward a border agreement in the near future.

It is hoped that this friendship will lead to peaceful development according to the principles of peaceful coexistence and mutual respect for each other. Both countries are working together on the development of border areas with all available means, ensuring peaceful development on the border.

A Boundary Determination Committee established by the two governments is working on the surveying and demarcation of the Afghan-Chinese border.
