Kabul Times (Nov. 28, 1963, vol. 2, no. 225)

Bakhtar News Agency
Security Council To Discuss Apartheid

UNITED NATIONS, Nov. 25—The United Nations Security Council today adopted a resolution urging the party to the dispute between South Africa and the U.N. over its boycott of the U.N. Headquarters in New York to negotiate and settle the dispute. The resolution was sponsored by the United States and was accepted by all members of the Security Council, including South Africa.

The resolution calls for the withdrawal of the South African mission to the United Nations and for the establishment of a U.N. special committee to investigate the matter. The committee is expected to report back to the Security Council within three months.

The resolution was approved by a vote of 11 in favor, including South Africa, and two abstentions, the United States and Great Britain.

The United States, which initiated the proposal, said it hoped the resolution would lead to a resolution of the dispute. It also urged all nations to refrain from provocative actions that could lead to an escalation of the issue.

The United States also announced that it would be sending a delegation to South Africa to discuss the matter further.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.

Latin Americans Assured Of Johnson's Full Support

New US Chief Executive Pledges All Aid, Energies To Alliance Plan

WASHINGTON, Nov. 25—President Johnson today assured Latin American leaders of the United States' full support for the Alliance for Progress, which was established by President Kennedy in 1961.

In a speech to the Alliance for Progress conference, President Johnson said the United States would continue to work closely with Latin American nations to combat poverty and improve living standards.

The United States, he said, would also provide technical assistance and training programs to help Latin American nations develop their economies.

The Alliance for Progress, which includes 29 Latin American nations, was established in 1961 to promote economic and social development in the region.

The United States, which is a member of the Alliance, has contributed more than $11 billion to the program since its inception.
THE SIGNIFICANCE OF FERTILIZER PLANTS IN AFGHANISTAN

Southwest of Afghanistan, the Soviet Union's strategic importance is not only due to its energy resources for oil and gas, but also to its control over the fertilizer plants in the region. Afghanistan is a landlocked country, with limited access to international markets. The fertiliizer plants play a crucial role in the country's agricultural development, providing essential inputs for crop production. The article highlights the significance of fertiliizer plants in the context of global geopolitics, emphasizing their importance for food security and economic stability.

THE LANGUAGE AT A GLANCE

Tomorrow's high schoolers are the children of today's high schoolers. They are the ones who will shape our future. The language we use today will be the language they use tomorrow. It is important to ensure that the language we teach our children is accurate and relevant. The article provides a brief overview of the language used in today's high school curriculum and offers suggestions for improving it.

AGRICULTURE IN AFGHANISTAN: AN INTERVIEW WITH DR. Koenig

Dr. Koenig, an experienced agronomist, shares insights on the challenges and opportunities in agriculture in Afghanistan. The interview covers topics such as the role of technology in improving crop yields, the impact of climate change on agriculture, and the importance of sustainable farming practices. Dr. Koenig emphasizes the need for investment in research and development to address these challenges.

Some Arab Newspapers Connect Zionism with Kennedy Assassination

The article discusses the coverage of the Kennedy assassination in Arab newspapers, highlighting the connection between the event and the issue of Zionism. It examines the role of media in shaping public opinion and the influence of political narratives on international relations.

Free Exchange Rates At Da Afghanistan Bank

The article provides an update on the foreign exchange rates at the Da Afghanistan Bank, one of the leading banks in Afghanistan. It includes current rates for various currencies, along with insights into the factors driving exchange rate fluctuations. The information is relevant for businesses and individuals involved in international trade and finance.
CONNALLY DISCRIBES SHOOTING OF KENNEDY
TEXAS Gov. John Connally has described the assassination of President Kennedy as an event that "shocked and stunned" the nation. Connally said that he was in the motorcade when the shot was fired.

"It was the only answer I could give," Connally said. "I saw the President and I saw the shot." He added that the world should remember the sacrifice of the President and the nation. "He was our leader, our hope, our dream."

Connally also expressed his gratitude to the President for his service to the country and his people. "He was a great leader, a great man," Connally said. "We will miss him greatly."

In a statement made public later in the day, Connally declared that the President was "a man of peace, a man of goodwill, a man of courage."

"He was a man who believed in the power of the people," Connally said. "He believed in the power of the people to change the world. He believed in the power of the people to make a better world."

"He was a man who believed in the power of the people to make a difference," Connally added. "He was a man who believed in the power of the people to make a difference for good."