HOW ERHARD DIFFERS FROM ADENAUER

At a glance

Mr. Konrad Adenauer, the new German Chancellor, is not likely to be confused with Mr. Franz Josef Strauss, his late predecessor. Strauss was a flamboyant, colorful figure who delighted in the limelight. Adenauer is more reserved, more cautious, and less likely to make controversial statements.

Adenauer is a moderate, a Social Democrat, while Strauss was a conservative, a Christian Democrat. Adenauer is expected to be more conciliatory in his foreign policy, while Strauss was more aggressive.

Adenauer is known for his ability to work with other politicians and to establish coalitions. Strauss was more of a lone wolf, who preferred to act independently.

Adenauer is expected to be more stable and less prone to sudden changes in policy. Strauss was known for his unpredictability.

Adenauer is expected to be more pragmatic and less ideological than Strauss. Strauss was known for his strong personal beliefs and was not always willing to compromise.
