U Thant Fears Renewal Of Fighting In Cyprus Would Harm U.N. Reputation

Impeccably dressed and speaking in a measured tone, U Thant arrived in Cyprus yesterday for the opening of the international conference. The United Nations Secretary General, U Thant referred to the 18th session of the Conference of the heads of states, who are meeting in the Greek town of Nicosia, in the last six months to take stock of the progress of the peacekeeping mission in Cyprus.

Defending the UN's role in the peacekeeping mission, U Thant said that the UN was not responsible for the lack of progress in the negotiations between the two sides. He expressed concern that the renewal of fighting in Cyprus would harm the UN's reputation.

The conference, which is expected to last two months, will discuss the implementation of the United Nations Cyprus peacekeeping mission. The mission, which was established in 1964, has been in operation for over 50 years and has been involved in several conflicts.

The Secretary General also expressed concern about the situation in the Middle East, particularly the situation in the West Bank and Gaza Strip. He said that the UN was working with all parties to find a peaceful solution to the conflict.

The conference will be attended by representatives from the UN, the members of the conference, and other international organizations. The Secretary General will be joined by other high-level officials from the UN and the conference members.
