

Journal of Religion & Film

Volume 21
Issue 1 April 2017

Article 6

1-21-2017

Last Men in Aleppo

William L. Blizek

University of Nebraska at Omaha, wblizek@unomaha.edu

Recommended Citation

Blizek, William L. (2017) "Last Men in Aleppo," Journal of Religion & Film: Vol. 21 : Iss. 1 , Article 6.
Available at: <http://digitalcommons.unomaha.edu/jrf/vol21/iss1/6>

This Sundance Film Festival Review is brought to you for free and open access by DigitalCommons@UNO. It has been accepted for inclusion in Journal of Religion & Film by an authorized editor of DigitalCommons@UNO. For more information, please contact unodigitalcommons@unomaha.edu.

UNIVERSITY OF Nebraska
Omaha

Last Men in Aleppo

Abstract

This is a film review of Last Men in Aleppo (2017), directed by Feras Fayyad and Steen Johannessen.

Keywords

Aleppo, Syria, War, White Helmets

Author Notes

William Blizek is the Founding Editor of the Journal of Religion and Film, and is Professor of Philosophy and Religion at the University of Nebraska at Omaha. He is also the editor of the Continuum Companion to Religion and Film (2009).

Last Men in Aleppo (2017), dir. Feras Fayyad and Steen Johannessen

This movie brings the suffering, the cruelty, the evil of Aleppo up close and personal-- man's inhumanity to man.

This movie indicts Bashar Al Assad and Vladimir Putin for being the criminals they are. This movie shows us the dedication and courage of the White Helmets who watch the skies to find the planes so they can rush to where the bombs will fall in order to save as many lives as possible.

This is a movie that condemns the international community, including Arab states, for failing to intervene.

This is a movie that raises the question: Does God exist? And, the clear answer is: No! There is no god worthy of worship that would allow the deliberate slaughter that has taken place in Aleppo.

One might be tempted to interpret the White Helmets as the hand of God, but the White Helmets seem more likely the expression of an indomitable human spirit.

We are left, then, in a world with pure evil and no God to turn to.