Commonwealth Faces Successive Blows

London, Dec. 19—The Commonwealth is gasping for breath. The events of the past 48 hours have been more than any of its 48 members could have expected, and in some cases, much more than they could have dared.

The events have sent a shock wave through the Commonwealth, which has been described as a "family" of nations. The shocks have come from all sides, with the United States, the Soviet Union, and China all playing a part.

The United States, which has been a key player in the Commonwealth, has been forced to make some difficult decisions. The Soviet Union, which has been a strong ally of China, has also been affected. And China, which has been a key member of the Commonwealth, has been forced to take some difficult steps.

The result is a Commonwealth that is in crisis, with many members feeling that they are being left behind.

Commonwealth officials are now working to find a way forward. They are also looking for ways to strengthen the organization and to make it more effective.

Machine Helps Diagnose Disease

The natures of the 14 billion viruses and bacteria that cause infectious diseases are beginning to be revealed by a new machine that can analyze stool samples in just 30 seconds.

The high-speed electronic machine, which can analyze about 10 million "bits" of information in about 30 seconds, provides "exquisite" ease and beauty by six to one.

The machine, which was supplied by the Science and Technology Agency, is now being used as a diagnostic tool in hospitals.

The bacteria and viruses—or "infectious agents involved"—of stool samples are analyzed by the machine, which produces a report that helps doctors diagnose and treat infections.

The machine is being used in hospitals in Europe, the United States, and Japan.
