Role Regional Courts Could Play

One of the ways to achieve world peace through regional courts is to have the proposals made by United States Chief Justice Harlan Fiske Stone in 1940. Stone said the courts should be established on an international scale, with the United States having a seat at the center of the system. He suggested that regional courts would be able to consider the point of view of the parties involved.

Since the world court has dealt with many cases, it has been able to satisfy all the parties involved. The court has been able to satisfy all the parties involved in all the cases.

Foreign problems are yet to decide at which stage the regional court should be established. The court might be given the power to act in certain cases, but it might be given no power to act in other cases.
