Afghanistan In The Past Fifty Years

Although this country had been a part of the Persian Empire for nearly two thousand years, it was not until 1919 that Afghanistan declared its independence of Persia. The Iranian forces had long been attempting to subdue the Afghan people, but the Afghanis, with their traditional tribal organization, were able to resist and maintain their independence. Following independence, Afghanistan was able to establish diplomatic relations with many countries and to develop its own political structure. However, the country has faced many challenges, including internal conflicts and external pressures from neighboring countries. Despite these challenges, Afghanistan has made significant progress in recent years, including improvements in education, healthcare, and infrastructure.

Afghanistan In The Past Fifty Years

The Afghan government does not have efficient administrative institutions to guarantee the observance of Afghan public holidays by the people of Afghanistan on a regular basis. In this connection, the government has recently introduced a new system of public holidays which is intended to ensure the observance of these holidays by the people of Afghanistan. The new system will be effective from the year 2000 onwards. Under this system, the government will observe all Afghan public holidays, including the Afghan New Year, on a regular basis. The new system is expected to bring about a significant improvement in the observance of Afghan public holidays by the people of Afghanistan.

The government also plans to introduce a new system of public holidays in the future which will be based on the principles of democracy and constitutional law. Under this system, the government will observe all Afghan public holidays, including the Afghan New Year, on a regular basis. Due to continual efforts of the Government and people of Afghanistan under the guidance of His Majesty the King, a good deal of progress has been achieved throughout Afghanistan. To take advantage of these facilities, a new modern style hotel is being built in Kabul, the picturesque and beautiful area of this country. Although a number of hotels have been built up in the past few years, they do not meet all the needs of tourists. Thus need for an International hotel in accordance with international standards is urgent.

Malina Pir Company (Pir) signed a construction contract with Taylor Woodrow International Ltd., London, to build a big modern hotel on international standards as a first step. As a result of this contract, they will build hotels throughout the country.

Construction work on the International Hotel on Baghe Bala hill began in April 1967, and will be completed by the end of 1968. The seven-storied International Hotel will have 150 rooms each with private baths and terrace. It will have separate big lounges for eating and other modern facilities in accordance with international standards.

The hotel will fill one of the biggest vacancies for tourists in the city. Wealthy tourists from all over the world will have accommodations there and Ariana Afghan Airlines and other economic enterprises will benefit. He found amongst the people of Afghanistan a great desire for trade and respect for British trade goods.
Fortunately the British traders, with a few notable exceptions, had not made the necessary efforts in the past to further this desire, whereas a number of British goods are now highly respected by the people of Afghanistan.

In fact, the trade centre seems now to be reality when the present time comes. The last year's visit to Kabul, together with the present one, has yielded very encouraging results.

In general, the trade centre seems to be running very smoothly and the business carried on successfully.

As important is the operation of the office in Kabul, managed by Mr. Macfie A. McNamee who ensure that the merchants in Afghanistan get speedy delivery and proper after-sales service.

Since April Mr. B. H. Biddle, who has spent 18

There are now employed in the Trade Centre eight Afghan working as sales staff, advisors, etc., who are taking increasing responsibility for the day to day running of the business. A large part of their work is in fact done in the English language. The Afghan Government view the Trade Centre as an outstanding example of Anglo-Afghan cooperation and ambition has increased to the point where it is now being expanded. A large number of staff are resident in the centre and it is envisaged that this will increase as the Trade Centre develops. the world of Adamjee

On the occasion of the beginning of the 50th anniversary of the regaining of Afghanistan's independence, the people of Pakistan offer their sincere congratulations to the people of Afghanistan, and wish them further progress and prosperity under the benevolent leadership of His Majesty the King.

Once Adamjee meant little to the world. But we have been able to industrialize in Pakistan, and now our products & services range from tractors and cotton textiles to banking & insurance. And we are proud of being part of the dynamic growth of Pakistan's economy.

A Tour Of The German Pavilions

The interested visitor needs a good half hour to see everything that is on display in the German pavilion. Here, in an exhibition area of 121,20 sq. m., Siemens has been able to demonstrate the order of energy generation and distribution in an uncomplicated yet instructive manner.

In fact, electricity and its possible applications from the local point of view are of the German pavilion field at the main entrance on the eastern side, the visitors' attention is drawn to flashing approach lights for airports. This type of lights is needed by airports for their take-off and landing runway—a field of urgent interest for Afghanistan's transport system.

The German exhibition makes frequent use of models to make industrial installations or mechanical processes understandable to all a whole as possible. In the very first pavilion, a transformer station is located and a turbine is demonstrated with a true-to-scale model. The third path dividing the pavilions is pleasant to walk on and also protected from the sun.

The German exhibition makes use of various types of plants which can be demonstrated with model installations or mechanical processes. An object of special interest in this part of the exhibition is the transformer station with a turbine section. The visitor to the German exhibition can thus reach the second pavilion in perfect comfort. At this point, in the same pavilion is an instruction model of a power supply installation. This model consists of a small bank of transformers, switches and puppets, which are demonstrated with a true-to-scale model.

The visitor will find models of circuit breakers and in-mounted motors and also an original low-voltage switchgear cabinet. In the southern section of the exhibition area, an object of special interest is the transformer station with low-voltage section. In the open-air area is devoted to movement of water and irrigation, especially for agriculture.

Pump sets and water pumps transport the water to various levels. A small pump unit with spray attachment can be seen in this section. Another interesting exhibit is the model of a small bank of transformers, which is a monobloc, with hard-coal chamber firing and coke-gas auxiliary firing. The path to the next pavilion runs past the model of a diesel generating set. In pavilion 5, models and demonstration set-ups are demonstrated with a true-to-scale model. The visitor will find models of industrial television systems and also as an original low-voltage switchgear cabinet.

To further clarify the points made, in pavilion 4, a sectional model of a Wankel engine will probably arouse the special interest of many visitors. The optical eye of an industry television system enables the viewer to observe himself in motion. A gag that has repeatedly proved a great attraction for the public in exhibitions all over the world.
